Insurers Discover N20bn Fraudulent Claims From #ENDSARS Destruction

BY ZAKA KHALIQ, Lagos

Businesses and individuals who suffered massive destruction from the last #EndSAR protests lodged fraudulent claims amounting to about

N20 billion to the insurance industry, LEADERSHIP can exclusively reveal. Investigation by LEADERSHIP shows that the insurance industry received about N40billion claims from the public, but discovered that about 50 per cent of the claims, amounting to about N20billion, were actually fraudulent. The industry, it was learnt, has so far paid N11 billion genuine claims from that incident with plans to pay additional N9 billion in the next couple of months. A fraudulent claim is an insurance claim request whose insured risk or incident is falsified and painted to look real. Here, the racketeer submits fake documentation to insurance companies with the motive to profit from the insurance system through claims. In the past, insurance operators

BACK STORY OF THE DAY

Nation’s Capital Groans Under Uncontrolled Influx Of People

BY IGHO OYOYO, Abuja

The Federal Capital Territory (FCT), Abuja, is an attraction to many either seeking greener pastures, or running from insecurity in other parts of the country. From statistics obtained from the FCT, the current metro area population of Abuja in 2022 this year is 3,652,000, a 5.43 percent increase from 2021. While in 2021, the metro area population of Abuja was 3,464,000, a 5.67 percent increase from 2020, and in 2020, the metro area population of Abuja was 3,278,000, a 5.91 percent increase from 2019.

This continuous increase in the influx of people to Abuja has become a cause for concern to people already residing in the FCT. They have attributed this uncontrolled population increase to the rising state of insecurity in the territory. A resident, Mr. Samuel Bala, lamented that people migrate to the FCT with different intentions. And without proper scrutiny by any agency, they freely perpetrate whatever intentions they have in their minds. “The insecurity in the territory is as a result of people trooping into the FCT without anybody checking who they are and what they are coming to do in the nation’s capital city. There is no way a city can be saved, if the people just troop into it the way they like, with no one to check them,” he said. Apart from the concerns of residents of Abuja, the Minister of the FCT, Mohammed Bello is also worried about the uncontrolled influx of people to the nation’s capital.

Bello, during the inauguration of a technical committee on the proposed FCT issuance of SUKUK of N200 billion for the FCT 2022 statutory budget, lamented what he described as an unprecedented influx of people to the FCT since the return to democracy in 1999. He revealed that the administration is on the verge of securing a N200 billion SUKUK loan, to facilitate the building of infrastructure such as roads and water projects across the territory, to meet up with the challenge of the influx. “The congestion and traffic situation mostly experienced in the city centre is due to unprecedented influx of people to the FCT since the return to democracy in 1999,” he said. He noted that the loan facility was needed to enable the FCT administration achieve its desired objective of rehabilitating and expanding some existing roads in the city, and opening up more roads to prevent traffic gridlock on major roads in the city. The minister said the troubling demographic changes are consequently overstretching Abuja’s infrastructure and social amenities, while resources for development become more and more scarce and unavailable, thereby threatening the dreams of the capital’s founding fathers.

Phone And NIN Wahala: Not Encouraging At All!

I sighed, so no phone for me until when they decide to fix this issue. I was about to put my phone aside when it blinked. It was a text message from my service providers telling me they had received my NIN and I should wait while they treat the matter. A part of me was relieved while the other part was still incensed. That did not mean I could begin using my phone immediately, I still had to wait for who knows until when. Later that night I watched sadly on TV, the crowd at the NIMC office who were trying to register their NINs to their sims without much success. People who had similar issues to my own of registering their NINs to their SIMs, but where still barred from making calls were being interviewed and venting out their annoyance. The painful part was that there were so many people there and no one was attending to them. Kai, what kind of thing is this? I wondered. Its not encouraging at all.

SUDOKU PUZZLE AND SOLUTIONS

Each Sudoku puzzle comes with some numbers already filled and each box has a corresponding row, column and 3x3 grid where the numbers cannot be repeated. The row, column or 3x3 grid with the most numbers filled is the best place to start, filling new numbers because there you have fewer options to choose from. As you fill each number on a box, you increase your chances of getting new spaces filled.

SEVEN TIPS: ON ESSENTIALS FOR LONG HAUL FLIGHTS

Here are some ways to stay comfortable during a long haul flight.

BUY YOUR TICKET AS EARLY AS POSSIBLE

Waiting and hoping for that $20 price drop, more often than not, is not worth the trouble. Not only does buying early give you peace of mind in the weeks and months leading up to your departure, it increases the likelihood that enough seats remain open for you to pick where you want to sit.

WEAR YOUR MOST COMFORTABLE OUTFIT

That fitted blouse and skin-tight pair of jeans might make you feel like you’re 20 again, but trust us—after sitting (and attempting to sleep) in them for 15 hours, you’ll never want to look at that outfit again. When it comes to long-distance travel, stick to a “comfy-chic” dress code of neutral, loose-fitting layers you can move around in.

CHOOSE YOUR IN-FLIGHT FOOD (AND DRINKS) CAREFULLY

That cheesy chicken parmesan wafting down the center aisle might smell delectable, but you may want to reconsider. Heavy meals keep you awake, and are more difficult to digest when all you’ll be doing for the next 15 hours is sitting, sitting, and sitting some more. If you can, avoid foods and drinks high on sugar, salt, or caffeine.

HYDRATE, HYDRATE, HYDRATE

Because planes are constantly replenishing cabin air with the air outside, the levels of humidity inside plane cabins are comparable to what you’d find in a desert—bone dry. The effects are two-fold: the extreme dryness dulls the skin, and, if not addressed, dehydration leads to worsened jet lag. It’s vital to drink plenty of water—approximately 8 ounces per hour, according to some experts.

TAKE THE SMALLEST PERSONAL ITEM YOU CAN

No matter how tall or short you are, when it comes to sitting in the same seat for hours on end, every inch of leg room is sacred. Don’t limit yours with a needlessly large personal item, which you’ll be forced to stow under the seat in front of you if you’ve also brought a carry-on onboard. Opt for a bag that’s versatile and soft, so you can squash it down if need be.

BRING YOUR OWN SNACKS, OR BUY SOME BEFORE BOARDING

One of the beauties of long-haul flights is how well you’re fed—often, at least two full meals and a mid-flight snack to curb your cravings are provided. But what about when the lights are out, flight attendants are nowhere to be found, and hunger pangs strike? What then? Be prepared with your own munchies and a bottle of water—especially if you’re the type that craves salt.

BE FRIENDLY TO AND RESPECTFUL OF YOUR SEATMATE- YOU’RE BOTH IN THIS TOGETHER

This might be self-explanatory, but be nice. Learn the rules of the air: unless you’re in the middle seat, hogging an interior armrest is a jerk move. Before reclining your chair, glance back to make sure it won’t disrupt anyone, and whatever you do, don’t do it during meal service.

COMOROS

The formal launch of the National Quality Policy in the Union of the Comoros is a significant milestone in the government’s overall strategy for economic and social development in the wake of the global pandemic health crisis. The National Quality Policy aims to strengthen the country’s quality infrastructure and establish a culture of higher standards both in public administration and in the private sector to ensure more inclusive and sustainable economic development in the Comoros.

TUNISIA

Accelerating structural reforms will be the key for Tunisia to recover fully from the COVID-19 recession, overcome economic vulnerabilities and raise living standards for all, according to a new OECD report. The latest OECD Economic Survey of Tunisia highlights the country’s success in fighting poverty and reducing gender imbalances in education and well-being in the past decade. This progress provides a solid base for an inclusive recovery from the 2020 recession. A pickup in commodity prices seen since the beginning of the war in Ukraine and the Omicron and potential new variants of COVID-19 could slow the recovery and exacerbate structural challenges.

SEYCHELLES

Despite having vast energy resources, Guinea-Bissau has one of the least developed economies in the world. Due to the west African country’s slow progress regarding the exploitation of its energy resources, due to limited investments in infrastructure development and political instability, little progress has also been made in expanding other sectors such as manufacturing and mining. However, recent increases in capital expenditure are set to revitalize the economy during 2022.

8 Years After: Chibok Memories Still Linger

Today marks the eighth anniversary of the mass abduction of school girls in Chibok town which brought the once obscure Borno State community to global attention. On the night of that day today, Boko Haram terrorists invaded the Government Girls' Secondary School, Chibok, and abducted a total of 276 schoolgirls from their dormitory.

It was the first time such a large number of school children would be abducted in such fashion and, expectedly, it drew global outrage, with world leaders in governance, business, entertainment, sports, etc., joining in the call for their release. Locally, the girls' cause was championed by the 'Bring Back Our Girls Group (BBOG)' which held peaceful demonstrations in Abuja for about three years to keep the pressure on the federal government to continue searching for the girls until they are returned alive.

The incident was a major embarrassment to the then President Goodluck Jonathan administration as it came under harsh scrutiny due to its perceived lethargic response to the incident, and it is believed to be one of the factors that eroded public confidence in the administration which ultimately cost it dearly in the 2015 general election.

President Muhammadu Buhari who took over from the Jonathan administration had made copious promises that his government would do everything within its power to secure the release of the girls. Of the 276 schools that were kidnapped that night, according to reports at the time, 57 of them managed to escape their captors that night of the attack, 21 others were released in October 2016 by the terror group in a deal brokered by the Red Cross, while federal government secured the release of 82 of them in May 2017 in a prisoner swap deal that reportedly involved releasing Boko Haram terrorists in detention. Some others were freed during military operations while six of them were also reported to have died in 2016.

However, about 100 of them are still missing. It is believed that, among the horrors they had faced in the hands of the violent criminals, many of them had been married off to terrorists while others may have been sold into slavery, as the slain former Boko Haram leader Abubakar Shekau claimed in one of his videos. Alarmingly, in our view, everything about the Chibok girls has gone quiet and there is no indication that government detectives are still making efforts towards finding and rescuing them from their present dire circumstances. Apart from the schoolgirls whose abduction grabbed world attention, there were a reported 2000 persons, mostly women and girls, who were in Boko Haram captivity at the time the Chibok kidnapping occurred. If the school girls are still missing, one can only imagine the fate of others.

Sadly, in our opinion, the Chibok incident opened the door for the kidnapping attacks on more schools across the northern parts of the country. In 2018, at a school in Dapchi, Yobe state, 110 girls were taken away by criminals. Fortunately, 104 were returned after a month, except for five that had died in the process and one, then 15-year-old Leah Sharibu, who was withheld for refusing to convert to Islam. Since then, mass abductions in schools have become commonplace, with bandit-terrorists raiding schools in Kaduna, Niger, Kebbi, Katsina, and Zamfara at will and demanding huge ransoms. Last year alone, 1441 school children were kidnapped and some of the victims are still in captivity.

As a newspaper, we are concerned that eight years after these girls were kidnapped, so many of them are still held captive. This is even more disturbing when the present APC-led administration, when it was in opposition, beat the then ruling PDP over the head on the matter claiming that it had the magic wand to rectify the situation. Today, the administration has not only failed to secure the release of the Chibok girls, but also has failed to prevent or discourage further kidnapping of schoolchildren, let alone rescue them. These days, parents of kidnapped schoolchildren are left to their own fate and are forced to yield to the demands of the terrorists. Even more worrisome is that the federal government and its agencies seem to have given up on looking for kidnapped children, and even adults, in Nigeria. That has emboldened the terrorists who have now turned the kidnapping of helpless Nigerians into a billion-naira crime industry.

Therefore, on this day, we urge the federal government not to relent in its primary duty of securing life and property, including, especially, our schoolchildren. It must dedicate special forces to deal with issues of kidnapping in order to hand over a safer country to the administration that will succeed it next year. That is the best legacy it can bequeath the nation after eight years in power.

24 Hours After Northern Elders' Resignation Call To PMB: FG Vows To Unveil Perpetrators Of Kaduna, Plateau Attacks

BY JONATHAN NDA-ISAIAH, ADEBIYI ADEDAPO, Abuja, BENJAMIN ISAIAH, Kaduna And ZAKA KHALIQ, Lagos

The federal government yesterday said it would soon reveal those behind recent terrorist attacks in Plateau, Kaduna and other parts of the country.

This pledge is coming just a day after the Northern Elders' Forum (NEF) asked the president to resign from office if he cannot secure the lives and property of Nigerians following rising killings in parts of the country.

Minister of Defence Bashir Magashi, who made this vow after the federal executive council meeting yesterday in Abuja, said the government would soon expose those who are causing the insecurity in the country.

While responding to a question on if government had identified those behind the attack, he said, "Honestly, I think the security chiefs are working hard to unveil those that are involved, and we will tell you very soon those that are carrying out these attacks.

"Both attacks in Jos and Kaduna, we will come and explain to the public what is really going on and our efforts to ensure that all these activities are stopped once and for all. We are really on top of the situation; we are planning hard and we will get it out as soon as possible."

Also, the federal government has blamed the alliance between Boko Haram and bandits for the recent Abuja-Kaduna train attack.

Minister of information, Lai Mohammed, disclosed this to State House correspondents after the federal executive council meeting presided over by President Muhammadu Buhari at the Presidential Villa, Abuja, yesterday. He assured Nigerians that the government was on top of the situation.

He said, "What is happening now is that there is a kind of an unholy handshake between bandits and Boko Haram insurgents.

"Preliminary reports of what transpired at the Kaduna train attacks show that there is a kind of collaboration between the bandits and the dislodged Boko Haram terrorists from the northeast. I can tell you very confidently that the federal government is on the top of this matter."

Buhari

El-Rufai

Lalong

On the 72-hour ultimatum by families of victims of the Kaduna train attack within which to secure their release or they take their fate in their hands, Mohammed said what the federal government was doing was not for public consumption "because we have lives at stake."

He, however, gave assurance that the various security agencies were working night and day to unravel the mystery surrounding the attack as a whole.

"On the kidnapped people, what I can assure you is that the respective arms of government are actually engaged as we speak, and are working to get those victims released."

Calls For PMB To Resign, Not Solution To Insecurity - Presidency

The Presidency yesterday responded to Northern Elders' Forum's call on President Muhammadu Buhari to resign on account of the security breaches in the country, saying resignation would not solve the problem.

He said, "It is enough to say, from our part, that resignation call on the President is not a solution to the security problems facing the country, something that has built up to a worrisome level following decades of neglect.

"It is more important that citizens know what their government is doing to deal with this situation and for politicians to come to terms with the fact the it is beneficial to all that they help to preserve the state so that when it is their turn, they will have a place that they will manage.

"People don't have to destroy what is there in a desperate quest to get power."

Shehu further said that, in response to the recent spike in terrorist activities, particularly in the Kaduna and Niger States axis, the defense establishment had realigned and reorganised the ongoing operation in the areas, as well as the Niger Delta region.

Reps Lament Protracted Terrorist Attacks, Ask President To Implement Security Summit Report

The House of Representatives yesterday decried incessant attacks by bandits in the country, lamenting that several of its resolutions on insecurity were not respected.

To this end, the House urged President Muhammadu Buhari to implement the report of its 2021 security summit which had been submitted to the executive arm of government.

The lawmakers who took turns to contribute to a motion moved by the member representing Pankshin/Kanam/Kanke federal constituency of Plateau State, Yusuf Gagdi, expressed regret that despite repeated resolutions to improve the country's security, much success had not been recorded.

Speaking while moving a motion during a plenary session yesterday Gagdi said 92 people were killed, 20 persons were injured in the attack, while 3,414 people had been displaced after the attack that occurred in Kanam LGA of Plateau state on Sunday.

"Terrorists unleashed terror on the people of Kanam local government area and neighbouring communities, killed 92 persons, injured over 20 people and destroyed properties in Kukawa, Kyaram, Gyambau and Dungur among other communities," he said.

"The total of 41 houses, 86 shops and eight motorcycles were completely burnt and destroyed, leaving a total of 3,413 persons displaced.

The legislator lamented that the assaults took place notwithstanding intelligence reports of impending attacks from the Department of State Services (DSS) on the influx of terrorists fleeing to Plateau and other neighbouring communities of Wase and Kanam local government areas.

"The security agencies have reliable information at their disposal of the various camps of these terrorists in Kambari forest in Taraba State as well as Bangala in Wase local government area of Plateau State where these terrorists organise and coordinate attacks on innocent citizens of Plateau State and other parts of Nigeria," he said.

Insurers May Cough Out N119m Compensation For Train Attack Victims

Following the recent terrorists attack on a Kaduna-bound train carrying 398 passengers, the insurance industry may cough out about N119.4 million as insurance claims for passengers of the ill-fated train, LEADERSHIP investigation revealed.

Credible sources from the Nigerian Railway Corporation (NRC) revealed that indeed the ill-fated train had Passengers-In-Transit Insurance coverage for the people onboard.

While the name of insurance companies which insured the train could not be ascertained as of the time of writing this report, there are strong indications that the insurance industry under the auspices of the Nigerian Insurers Association (NIA) is already discussing and engaging the concerned insurers to ascertain the level of coverage and plans to compensate the victims of the attack.

A credible source in the industry disclosed that Passenger-In-Transit Insurance policy, which could be embedded or a one-off purchase, covers death, permanent disability and medical expenses of those involved.

Further revelation shows that each passenger could be entitled to a sum of N100,000 to N300,000 claims each depending on the level of risk exposure as it also varies from one insurer to the other.

Using the N300,000 as the benchmark, the insurance industry could compensate the 398 passengers to the tune of N119.4 million cumulatively.

In an exclusive interview with LEADERSHIP, the chairman of NIA, Mr. Ganiyu Musa confirmed that, indeed, the train was insured and that the association was already collating the necessary details to know the extent of coverage and the companies that underwrote the risk.

Similarly, in a phone interview with LEADERSHIP yesterday, the chairman/CEO of Anchor Actuarial Services Limited, Dr. Pius Apere, said the passenger-in-transit insurance is usually known as a rider product, noting that if truly NRC had this policy in place, it should embark on awareness exercise to ensure that those concerned can file in their claims.

Earlier, the Nigerian Council of Registered Insurance Brokers (NCRIB) had condoled with the victims of the deadly attack on unsuspecting passengers of the Nigerian Railway Corporation (NRC) train facility.

Meanwhile, for the passengers involved in the incident, NRC, in a notice on its website, stated that "in the event of a train accident resulting into injury, permanent disability and or death, the claimant shall duly complete Personal Accident claim form for NRC passengers.

"The claimant shall bring all documents/evidence to any of the Nigerian Railway Corporation stations on the Abuja-Kaduna train service corridor, or the Head Office at Ebute-Metta, Lagos," it pointed out.

Killings Portrays Absence Of Govt In Nigeria - Christian Elders

Meanwhile, the Northern States Christian Elders Forum (NOSCEF) Kaduna State chapter, has said that the continued attacks and unwarranted killings in virtually all parts of the country make it look as if there is no government in place.

A statement by the state chairman, Elder Garba Asandu, said, "The rampant cases of community attacks, kidnapping, bombing and raping, among others, with great impunity is making us feel there is no government or those in government do not know what to do, or are just incapable of discharging their responsibilities to their fatherland."

The statement appreciated Governor Nasir El-Rufai of Kaduna State for his boldness and courage to publicly apologize to victims of the detestable act and accept failure.

EXPLAINER

- The federal government has again vowed to unravel the recent attacks and killings in Kaduna and Plateau states where over 100 persons lost their lives.
- Despite federal government's threats, the terrorists have continued to attack and kill innocent and hapless people.
- It was against this backdrop that the Northern Elders Forum (NEF) on Tuesday called on President Muhammadu Buhari to resign forthwith, having failed in his primary responsibility to protect lives and property.
- The Presidency yesterday condemned the call by NEF asking the President to resign, saying it's not the solution to the security challenges facing the country.

NLC Gives FG 21 Days To Resolve Crisis In Education Sector

BY ADEGWU JOHN, Abuja AND ANDREW OJIEZEL, Lagos

Nigeria Labour Congress (NLC) yesterday gave the federal government 21 days to resolve all the issues militating against industrial harmony in Nigeria’s university system.

The resolution came after the congress leadership met with the striking affiliate unions in the education sector on Tuesday in Abuja.

In a communique issued yesterday in Abuja jointly signed by NLC national president, Comrade Ayuba Wabba and general secretary, Comrade Emmanuel Ugboaja, the congress expressed concern over the idleness and fate of more than 95 per cent of Nigerian students constituted largely by children of the poor who cannot afford to pay the average of N1 million school fees charged by private tertiary institutions.

The congress called on the federal government to immediately set up a high -powered panel constituted of members with requisite mandates to resolve within 21 days the foregoing issues militating against industrial harmony in Nigeria’s university system. In pursuant to the resolution, the Nigeria Labour Congress would be convening a special meeting of the Central Working Committee (CWC) of all the affiliate unions of the congress to decide on the next line of action.

At the meeting in Lagos, Wabba called on all affiliate unions for mobilisation against the protest that can take place without any further warning.

Declaring the readiness of NLC to take over the battle from where ASUU had reached, Wabba cited the fate of children of the poor that cannot afford private universities which is causing great pain to the union as reason for the intervention of NLC into the strike.

He expressed concern over, “The fate of more than 95 per cent of Nigerian students constituted largely by children of the poor who cannot afford to pay the average of N1 million school fees charged by private tertiary institutions and who are currently idling away at home while the children of the rich continue with their education.”

1.8m New PVCs Ready For Collection, Says INEC

BY TUNDE OGUNTOLA, Abuja

Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC), has disclosed that a total of 1,854,859 Permanent Voters Cards (PVCs) are now ready, to be delivered to its state offices across the country during the Easter holiday.

The nation’s electoral body sadly noted that nearly 45 per cent of completed registrations nationwide are invalid, rising to as high as 60 per cent or more in some states.

This infraction according to the commission happened in all states of the federation as no state was immune from it, adding that invalid registrations will not be included in its register of voters.

The chairman of INEC, Prof Mahmood Yakubu, who disclosed this yesterday in Abuja while briefing newsmen on the Ongoing Voter Registration Exercise, said the PVCs will be available for collection by the actual owners in person immediately after the holiday. He stressed that no PVC will be collected by proxy.

The INEC helmsman reiterated that the available cards only cover those who registered in the first and second quarters of the exercise.

He also assured those who registered between January and March 2022 as well as those who are doing so right now that their PVCs will be ready for collection long before the 2023 general election.

He said, “After completing the data clean-up, the Commission has printed 1,390,519 PVCs for genuine new registrants.

“In addition, 464,340 PVCs for verified applicants for transfer or replacement of cards have also been printed. Consequently, a total of 1,854,859 PVCs are now ready.”

Also, as part of the preparation for the 2023 election, Yakubu said the commission will commence a mock deployment of the Bimodal Voters Accreditation System (BVAS) to continue to check the efficacy of the machine.

29 Die, Others Missing In Sokoto Boat Mishap

Twenty-nine persons were confirmed dead on board a boat that capsized on Tuesday at Gidan Magana River in Shagari local government area of Sokoto State, while the search for others is ongoing.

The capsized boat was transporting locals from neighbouring villages to hinterland enroute major towns for their daily activities.

Although the total number of passengers in the boat was unknown, 29 corpses, including five males and twenty four females so far recovered, have been buried.

The chairman, Shagari local government area of Sokoto State, Alhaji Aliyu Dantani, who had earlier confirmed the recovery of 26 dead bodies, told our correspondent that three more corpses were recorded by the search parties engaged by the council.

According to the council boss, “We are yet to ascertain the actual number of people on board the ill fated boat or the cause of the mishap.

“Our priority at present is in search of possible survivors and bodies of those washed away by local divers, to accord them a befitting burial. After this, we can begin to look into what actually happened.”

Confirming the accident, the director-general, Sokoto State Emergency Management Agency, SEMA, Alhaji Nasiru Ahmed said, “I received the report of the boat accident in Shagari local government and we have since joined forces with National Emergency Management Agency, NEMA, to visit the area and ascertain the situation. SEMA will make necessary provision to the riverine area to forestall other future occurrence.”

Shagari local government is not known for such accidents, until the establishment of a dam in the area by the former minister of water resources, Mukhtari Shehu Shagari, during former President Olusegun Obasanjo administration.

US Govt Reassures Imo State Of Support Against Pandemic

BY INNOCENT ODOH, Abuja

The Chargé d’Affaires (CDA) of the United States (US) Mission in Nigeria, Kathleen FitzGibbon, has reassured the Government of Imo State of the US Government’s continued support and assistance concerning the COVID-19 pandemic.

A statement issued yesterday by the Public Affairs Section of the US Embassy in Abuja, said the Chargé gave the assurance when she visited the State to observe the ongoing COVID-19 vaccination exercise supported by the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) through its implementing partner, the Catholic Caritas Foundation of Nigeria (CCFN).

At the Headquarters of Owerri Municipal Council, the venue of the vaccination exercise, FitzGibbon reiterated the need for all eligible persons to come out and receive their vaccinations which are being offered free of charge. She said doing so will not only keep the individuals safe but also protect their families and communities.

She encouraged the people of Imo State to not be complacent despite the seeming relaxation of COVID-19 prevention protocols around the world, especially in the face of several variants circulating and potentially new and emerging variants.

The Chargé applauded those who presented themselves to get vaccinated and urged them to encourage members of their families and communities to do the same. “The sooner a significant percentage of the population is vaccinated against COVID-19, the sooner we can end the pandemic and return to normal,” she said, while also thanking healthcare workers for their tireless efforts in ensuring the vaccines get into the arms of eligible people in Imo State.

FitzGibbon noted that the consistent and straightforward messaging in Imo State concerning COVID-19 vaccines is an excellent example of encouraging people to associate taking the vaccines with their personal and family wellbeing.

A stakeholder meeting with Imo State Government officials, traditional rulers, religious leaders, development partners, and media executives, took place on the final day of the visit.

During the meeting, the Chargé and Governor Hope Uzodinma appealed to traditional and religious leaders to lead by example by taking the vaccines and spreading the message that the vaccines are safe, effective, and available, so members of congregations and communities who were hesitant before can now come out and take the vaccines as well.

During a question-and-answer interactive session, the State Commissioner of Health, Dr. Prosper Success, and the US-CDC Country Director, Dr. Mary Boyd, responded to issues around COVID-19 vaccines efficacy, safety, availability, and access in Imo State.

have paid huge claims believed to be fraudulent, but the industry has improved over time, and are now able to detect claims lodged fraudulently, and hence are able to cut down these unnecessary expenses and add more to their bottom line.

Confirming this development, at the 6th BusinessToday Conference in Ikeja, Lagos, at the weekend, the chairman, Nigerian Insurers Association (NIA), Mr. Ganiyu Musa, acknowledged that fraudulent claims were indeed lodged from the #EndSARS destruction.

Musa, who is also the group managing director/CEO of Cornerstone Insurance Plc, noted that several mechanisms put in place by insurance companies were able to discover these fraudulent claims before they were paid, hence, the industry was able to avert such fraudulent payment.

According to him, "We have to take our time because the industry received about N40billion claims request, of which 50 per cent or more are actually fraudulent. But we are lucky the mechanisms put in place by different insurance companies were able to discover them before they were actually paid which saves the industry a lot of money."

The essence of insurance, he said, is to put the insured victims in a financial position he or she was before risk crystalizes, even as he warned Nigerians against profiting from an insurance system that gets little in the form of premium and is paying much as claims.

"The motive of insurance is not to profit from it but some want to profit from the system by lodging fraudulent claims. As insurers, we have to conduct our due diligence to separate fake claims from genuine ones," he said.

Earlier, the managing director/CEO, Universal Insurance Plc, Mr. Ben Ujoatuonu, said claims payment is an important aspect of insurance business and operators have improved in the time it takes to settle claims.

Disclosing that most insurers had invested heavily in Information Technology (IT) to improve turnaround time, as well as to be prompt in service delivery, he urged Nigerians to insure their assets and lives, adding that underwriters will always pay claims as long as they genuine.

He disclosed that NIA and the National Insurance Commission

(NAICOM) have complaint Bureaux where aggrieved customers can channel their complaints, urging Nigerians to approach these Bureaux if their insurers fail to honour claims obligations.

Similarly, chief consultant, B. Adedipe Associates Limited (BAA Consult), Dr. 'Biodun Adedipe, on his part, while appreciating efforts put in place by insurance companies to pay genuine claims, advised operators to improve in the area of customer service delivery.

He urged insurance operators to listen to pain-points of their policyholders and act on them, stating that "every criticism of customers about your service is to ensure you improve on service delivery."

Insurance firms, he said, must not wait until a policy elapses before reaching out to their clients. He told insurers that they must celebrate their customers' birthday and marriage anniversary, among others, to make customers feel elated and important.

During the last #EndSARS protests in the country, most government offices, banks, shopping malls, media houses, toll plazas, and private offices were set on fire by suspected hoodlums after soldiers reportedly shot in the air to disperse protesters on the night of 30 October, 2020.

The estimated cost of destruction has been put above N1 trillion.

While most insurance contracts excluded damage to property from war, riots, or other forms of force majeure, most underwriters decided to use discretion to pay claims emanating from such risks, even though some policies have no such extension.

2023: I'm Not Running To Negotiate For VP Slot – Wike

BY RICHARD NDOMA, Calabar

Rivers State governor and presidential hopeful in the 2023 election, Ezenwo Nyesom Wike, has said he did not join the race to negotiate for the vice president’s ticket of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP).

He said he was in the contest to become Nigeria’s president and nothing less.

To get the PDP’s presidential ticket, Wike promised to intensify consultation among the party’s stakeholders across the 36 states of the federation.

Wike made the pledge during a thank you visit to the PDP stakeholders organised by the Cross River State chapter of the opposition in Calabar.

He solicited for support from the delegates to the forthcoming presidential primaries where votes of the delegates would count for any aspirant to emerge as the party’s standard bearer.

"I am not running to negotiate for anything. I'm not running to negotiate for vice president of Nigeria.

"I have not asked anyone to buy or hold any senate form for me. I am only running for the seat of president of Nigeria.

"I came here to talk to the delegates. I want you people to see me face to face. I am not like those people who sent people to come and talk to you on their behalf. "You want to be president and you are sending people to talk to delegates? I won't send anyone to come and talk to you on my behalf.

"I have much energy. I 'm not like those people who go about seeking consensus. I hate deceit.

"The mere fact that you have indicated interest to run does not mean that you are running. To be president of Nigeria, you have to work very hard to emerge.”

While saying that he is the only man with capacity to crush opposition party, who would stand as an impediment to the PDP winning the presidential election in 2023, Wike said. "I have the capacity to win the presidential election for the PDP.

2023: PDP Closes Entry Today, 17 Presidential Aspirants Pick Forms

BY CHIBUZO UKAIBE, Abuja

Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) will close the sale of nomination forms today after generating over N650million from the 17 presidential aspirants who bought forms ahead of its presidential primary election billed to hold on May 28, 2022.

This is even as national chairman of the main opposition party in Nigeria, Dr Iyorchia Ayu, declared yesterday that the party has no preferred presidential candidate ahead.

So far, 17 male aspirants have picked their forms, while the only female aspirant only paid for the expression of interest form.

The party had fixed the N5 million for the purchase of expression of interest and N35 million for nomination forms.

PDP had further extended the closing dates for the purchase and submission of Expression of Interest and Nomination Forms for the 2023 general election.

The party’s national publicity secretary, Hon Debo Ologunagba, said under the new timelines, the last day for the purchase of all forms had been extended to Thursday, April 14, 2022 while the last day for the submission of all forms had been extended to April 17, 2022.

He further said, “Under the adjusted timetable, the following dates have been fixed for screening of aspirants for various positions: “State House of Assembly: April 19, 2022; National Assembly: April 20, 2022; Governorship: April 21, 2022; Presidential: April 25, 2022.

“Screening Appeals are scheduled as follows; State House of Assembly: April 21, 2022; National Assembly: April 22, 2022; Governorship: April 26, 2022 Presidential: April 27, 2022.”

Meanwhile, national chairman of the PDP, Dr Ayu, yesterday said that the party has no preferred presidential candidate ahead of the May 28 primary election.

He however declared that any of the party’s 17 presidential candidates will do 1,000 times better than the All Progressives Congress (APC) administration.

Ayu who stated this while receiving a presidential aspirant and governor of Bauchi State, Bala Mohammed, said Nigerians will vote for PDP massively in 2023.

He however assured that the party leadership will ensure level playing field for all aspirants ahead of the party's primaries, adding that the party has no preferred candidate.

The presidential aspirants of the PDP so far are governor of Sokoto State, Aminu Tambuwal; a United States-based medical doctor, Nwachukwu Anakwenze; media mogul, Dele Momodu; governor of Rivers State, Nyesom Wike; Investment banker and economist, Mohammed Hayatu-Deen; former governor of Anambra State, Peter Obi; governor of Akwa Ibom State, Udom Emmanuel; a Pharmacist, Sam Ohuabunwa, and former Ekiti governor, Ayo Fayose.

Others are former Vice President Atiku Abubakar; former Senate president, Abubakar Bukola Saraki; former secretary to the government of the federation, Anyim Pius Anyim and governor of Bauchi State, Bala Mohammed, as well as the only female aspirant in the race, Oliver Tareila Diana.

Noting that the aspirants have the capacity to perform more than the APC administration, Ayu said, “Any of our 17 aspirants will do 1000 times better than what APC has subjected Nigerians to in the last few years.

“We are happy Nigerians will vote for PDP massively. We are very close to the end point of rescuing this county and it is my prayer that by next year we will be at eagle square taking over power to redeem this country.

“If it is you we know that you are eminently qualified. We don’t have a preferred candidate. If we have our way we would do term sharing for all the aspirants because you are all eminently qualified.”

He added that the party will not dwell on its past achievements but would tell Nigerians what they intend to do when they take over office.

Ayu continued: “We don’t want to dwell on our past that of what we did. We want to tell Nigerians that we know what you are going through we know your problems. And PDP will move to tackle those problems. We don’t want to talk about what we did in 16 years.”

Expressing confidence that the PDP will win the presidency in 2023, he said, “We shall be impartial no manipulations and no shortcuts whenever wins will know he won genuine and he who loses will know that he lost fairly.

“We will do everything possible to provide level playing field right from ward to national levels. We will be transparent. Nobody said anything about foul play in the last convention and we want to surpass it.”

N24bn Fraud: Supreme Court Affirms Ex-Pension Director's 6-yr Jail Term

BY KUNLE OLASANMI, Abuja

The Supreme Court has affirmed the six-year jail term given for a former pension director in the Federal Civil Service, John Yusuf Yakubu. Yakubu was convicted for his complicity in the conversion of about N24billion from the Police Pension Fund. In 2018, the Court of Appeal in Abuja, reversed an earlier decision of Justice

Abuabakar Talba of the High Court of the Federal Capital Territory (FCT) which convicted him on a three-count charge and gave him an option of fine at N250,000 per count. The Court of Appeal had sentenced Yakubu to two years imprisonment. In its judgment Wednesday, the Supreme Court, upheld the 2018 decision of the Court of Appeal. The apex court apart from affirming the six years sentence also ordered him to refund the N22.9B to the federal government covers. Justice Tijjani Abubakar in his judgment in an appeal filed by Yusuf upheld the decision of the Court of Appeal which in 2018 sentenced him to six years imprisonment in addition to ordering him to refund the huge sum. The apex court held that Yusuf and others engaging in fraudulent practices must be told in clear language through court judgments that it is no longer business as usual. Justice Abubakar said that the appeal of the former federal pension director seeking to set aside the six years jail term against him was frivolous, vexatious and devoid of merit. He held that victims of the convicted director deserved restitution which can only be achieved through justice.

COEASU Asks FG To Deploy UTAS In Tertiary Institutions

BY HENRY TYOHEMBA, Abuja

Colleges of Education Academic Staff Union (COEASU) has called on the federal government to drop its ego and accept the University Transparency and Accountability Solution (UTAS) platform as a payment solution in all tertiary institutions in the country. COEASU said such becomes imperative as UTAS takes care of the peculiarities of the institutions including financial autonomy, sabbatical service, and the administration of discipline. The union president, Dr. Smart Olugbeko, who stated this in a statement yesterday, commended the Academic Staff Union of Universities (ASUU) for living up to its pedigree as a union of intellectuals and eggheads as it came up with UTAS as an alternative to the controversial Integrated Payroll and Personnel Information System (IPPIS) platform. He said the intractable challenge created by the IPPIS has been a great source of worry and constituted one of the major issues causing industrial crisis in the College of Education (COE) system and others. "IPPIS breaches the establishment integrity of the tertiary institutions system, undermines the statutory functions of the Governing Councils, and opens the payroll up to unilateral manipulations. "Within a short time after its unilateral imposition on tertiary institutions by the Federal Government in February 2020, academic Unions' opposition to it was vindicated as the IPPIS pay platform engendered several irregularities, such as salary omission, accommodation of ghost workers, mutilated salary, and inconsistency in payment of salary of staff on sabbatical and study leaves.

Osinachi: UK Foundation Condemns Violence Against Women

A United Kingdom (UK)-based humanitarian organisation with passion for girls and women's right, Jose Foundation UK, has condemned the increasing spate of violence against women in Nigeria. In a reaction to the death of popular gospel singer, Mrs Osinachi Nwachukwu, who died last week from complications allegedly linked to spousal abuse, the president of Jose Foundation UK, Dr Martins Abhulimhen, in a statement on Wednesday in London lamented the spate of abuse of women in Nigeria which has in several cases terminated the lives of many women.

He said the situation had taken a new dimension with the advent of COVID-19 in Nigeria and its impact on the economy of the country. He stressed that 48 per cent of Nigerian women had experienced at least one form of violence since the pandemic quoting a United Nations Women report. Abhulimhen said the death of Osinachi from complications allegedly related to abuse from her husband brought to fore the quest by Jose Foundation UK to end gender-based violence (GBV) in Nigeria.

Court Sacks Ebonyi PDP Chairman

BY KUNLE OLASANMI, Abuja

A Federal High Court sitting in Abuja, the Federal Capital Territory, yesterday held that Mr Tochukwu Okorie was not validly nominated to contest election for the position of chairman of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) in Ebonyi State. Delivering judgment in the suit filed by Silas Onu, challenging the election of Okorie, Justice Ahmed Mohammed held that Okorie was indolent in submitting his nomination form and could not be allowed to benefit from his wrong doing. Justice Mohammed consequently directed the PDP to hold that only Onu was lawfully nominated to participate in the election of Oct. 16, 2021 and to issue him a certificate of return declaring him as the duly elected Chairman of PDP, Ebonyi Chapter. Mohammed said the 2nd defendant (Okorie), who submitted his nomination form on Oct. 4, 2021 instead of Oct. 1, 2021, contrary to the guidelines of the conduct of congresses is not validly nominated. The judge said he (Okorie) was therefore not qualified to contest in the said election of Oct. 16, 2021. According to the judge, "It is the opinion of this court that the 2nd defendant, who was indolent in submitting his nomination form as provided in the guidelines issued by the PDP, who in spite of this failure, was still declared and returned elected, cannot be allowed to benefit from his wrong doing."

2023: Respect Power Rotation, CAN Youths Tell Politicians

BY SUNDAY ISUWA, Abuja

The youth wing of the Christian Association of Nigeria (YOWICAN) has called on Nigerian politicians to respect power rotation principle in the country and ensure that power shift to South in 2023. According to the youths, shifting power to the South in the 2023 will promote peace in the country. In a communique issued after their meeting in Abuja, the chairman and secretary Belusochukwu Enwere and Bako Adashu Edashu Elijah, respectively, said Christian / Christian ticket and Muslim/ Muslim ticket won't work in 2023. YOWICAN decries the increasing rate of insecurity in Nigeria, but commended the efforts of government and security agencies in combating the nefarious activities of bandits, killer herdsmen and insurgents. The youths further called on government and the security agencies to approach all persons who have made statements/assertions claiming to know the bandits, terrorists and criminals (and/or their camps or hideouts); to come and assist in fishing-out these evil people. "Despite the efforts so far made in the combating crime, YOWICAN observes the urgent need to curb the rising wave of attacks, killings, destruction of lives, properties, farmlands and livelihood of innocent citizens within the Northern states, specifically within Christian communities. If this malady is not checked, there is every likelihood that farming and economic activities will be crippled in 2022 farming season , affect the smooth conduct of the 2023 general elections and do so much harm to our nation.

FG Links Outages, Infrastructure Failure To Sabotage

BY JONATHAN NDA-ISAIAH, Abuja

Federal government has attributed the ongoing crisis facing the nation's power sector to acts of sabotage being perpetrated by some Nigerians.

Minister of Power, Abubakar Aliyu, disclosed this to State House correspondents after the Federal Executive Council meeting presided over by President Muhammadu Buhari at the Presidential Villa.

According to him, several recent incidences, including fatal attacks and abduction of foreign workers, who are working on various power projects, had stalled progress in achieving completion on some projects, while other attacks on installations had led to major power cuts.

He said these acts of sabotage had been robbing Nigeria of investors and development while appealing to Nigerians to join the federal government combating the war on sabotage, which he said is actually a war for all citizens to wage.

He said, "You're all aware this country is facing a lot of challenges. It's not only in the power sector alone, you have just heard about the insecurity. The railway and the communities are being attacked, oil pipelines. They're all similar things, including the power sector.

"You can call it sabotage because how can somebody go and pull down a 330 (megawatt) tower to cause this havoc to the whole country. What do you call that?"

"Not quite long, on January 4, the project that we had announced that we're going to commission, the Zungeru, 700 megawatts hydro, which is at present over 92% completion, we're just doing little touches to commission the project.

Assault On Journalists: IPI Nigeria Opens 'Black Book' For Perpetrators

BY TUNDE OGUNTOLA, Abuja

International Press Institute (IPI) Nigeria has said that it will open a book of infamy to document every individual whose action or inaction encourages or allows the harassment of journalists and the media in Nigeria.

The president of IPI Nigeria, Musikilu Mojeed, stated this during a courtesy visit by the body to the minister of Information and Culture, Alhaji Lai Mohammed, in Abuja.

The minister insisted that Nigeria is one of the very few countries in the world where journalists continued to practice their profession without hindrance despite the abuse of press freedom.

In a statement issued yesterday by the IPI Nigeria's secretary, Ahmed Shekarau, Mojeed said the move became necessary in view of the country's worsening press freedom record under the current administration.

He said, "I like to inform you of a decision recently taken by the Nigerian National Committee of IPI. We have decided to open a 'black book' to document every individual whose action or inaction encourages or allows the harassment of journalists and the media in Nigeria.

"The records so gathered will be regularly updated and shared periodically with embassies, and all relevant international and human rights groups across the world. "We will use the records to ensure named individuals are held accountable one way or another."

He said there were many Nigerians who believe the media was freer and stronger in 2015 than it is now, a perception that tallies with at least two global rankings.

This was disclosed by the managing director of the agency, Dr. Adeniyi Saheed Aremu, who restated LNRBDA's commitments to assisting Nigeria to actualise food security for the citizenry.

He told journalists in Ilorin, the Kwara State capital yesterday that, "In order to ensure all year food production, the authority has constructed some dams to provide water for irrigation during the dry season and between 2017 and 2021, 15 new irrigation schemes were established both

Nigeria’s e-Passport Ranks 99th Best In The World – Minister

BY CHRISTIANA NWAOGU, Abuja

Nigeria’s e-Passport has been ranked 99th best out of over 200 countries’ passports in the world, as their holders can even visit a number of destinations without visas.

Quoting Henley Passport Index’s second-quarter global passport ranking for 2022 report, the minister of interior, Ogbeni Rauf Aregbesola, described the stride as a “no mean feat”, adding that it is indicative of Nigeria’s passport’s acceptability globally. According to him, Henley Passport Index is the original authoritative ranking of the world’s passports.

At the opening of a two-day workshop for passport control officers (PCOs) of the Nigeria Immigration Service (NIS) held at the agency’s headquarters in Abuja, Aregbesola said the Immigration Service had between 2019 and the period under review issued about three million passports to Nigerians.

This, he said, was despite the challenges of COVID-19 which greatly affected the availability of booklets and the passport issuing process. “Nevertheless, over 250,000 passports have been unclaimed by their owners and lying idle on the shelf.”

He cautioned prospective applicants against patronising touts and NIS officials but to utilise the online portal to avoid being scammed.

Aregbesola said, “It is absolutely necessary therefore for all applicants to go to the NIS online portal to process their application and avoid patronising touts and NIS officials.

“We are taking complaints of solicitations and inflation of processing fees against NIS officials very seriously and will land a heavy stick of the law on culprits. Covert agents will soon be going around passport offices to apprehend touts and officials involved in these unwholesome practices. To be forewarned is to be forearmed.

BY ABDULLAHI OLESIN, Ilorin

National Board for Technical Education (NBTE) has decried the inadequate funding of the polytechnics by the state governments.

The North Central coordinator of NBTE, Dr Musa Koko, stated

this in his presentation at a workshop organised by the Federal Polytechnic, Offa, Kwara State on the institution’s “ 2021-2024 Strategic Plan Critique Workshop.”

Appeal Court Nullifies Verdict In Favour Of Kano Politician

BY ABDULLAHI YAKUBU, KANO

The Court of Appeal sitting in Kano has set aside judgement of the Federal High Court, Kano that discharged and acquitted a governorship aspirant, Abdulsalam SaleAbdulkarim Zaura, popularly known as AA Zaura.

Zaura was prosecuted by the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC) on a five-count charge before the Federal High Court sitting in Kano.

The commission accused Zaura of defrauding a Kuwaiti national by obtaining the sum of $1,320,000 under the pretext that he is in the business of building properties in Dubai, Kuwait and other Arab countries.

On 9th June, 2020, Justice Lewis Allagoa found the defendant not guilty and discharged him on all the counts.

Dissatisfied with the judgement of the lower court, counsel representing the prosecution Barr. Musa Isah took the matter to Court of Appeal in a bid to overturn the verdict of the lower court. In a unanimous decision by three-man panel of judges of the Court of Appeal and delivered by Justice Abdullahi M. Bayero, the judgement of the Federal High Court was set aside.

Bayero also ordered that the defendant be tried afresh by a different judge other than Justice Allagoa.

The main point of contention in the appeal was that the accused person was absent when the judgement was delivered and based on several judgements of the Supreme Court, it was held that an accused person must always be present in court throughout his trial including judgement.

BY NAJIB SANI, Gombe

Gombe State governor Inuwa Yahaya has said about 75,000 families who were displaced by insurgents from the neighbouring North East states have resettled in the state.

Inuwa spoke yesterday when he received the chairman of the Nigeria Governors Forum (NGF) and governor of Ekiti

State Kayode Fayemi who visited the state.

He said the influx of the displaced persons into Gombe was because of its relative peace, location in the centre of the region and sharing boundaries with five North East states.

“Naturally, what happened elsewhere, we feel the effect of insurgency because of the displaced persons that came to settle here. We made this place to be home for them.

“As at the last count, about 75, 000 families have resettled in Gombe. I don’t think even if an opportunity comes, they will still think of going back because they have resumed their normal lives,” he said.

On his part, Fayemi said he was on a mission to discuss with governors on some of the challenges facing the nation and see how they could address them.

Asked if his visit to the state was part of consultation for his presidential bid, the governor of Ekiti State said it was not the right time for him to make decision especially now that many citizens concentrate on Ramadan fast.

for such facilities for proper teaching and learning.

He also enjoined the Banking and Finance students of the college in whose name the edifice is going to be constructed to make good use of the facilities provided and safeguard it for others coming after them to also benefit.

He told them to consider themselves lucky because whenever they are on their way to the school, they normally pass so many young men and women loitering about the streets without school and thus should be grateful to be part of the education system.

Speaking earlier the national president of the Chartered Institute of Bankers of Nigeria (CIBN) Dr Bayo Olubgemi said the banking industry still remains as one of the major ingredients of national development and source of employment to many Nigerians.

Nigeria Needs Me Now, Says Tinubu, As Sanwo-Olu, Obasa Canvass Support For Presidential Bid

STORIES BY GEORGE OKOJIE, Lagos

National leader of the All Progressives Congress (APC) Asiwaju Bola Tinubu on Wednesday said Nigeria needs a courageous leader like him to effect drastic changes and reposition the country for economic growth and rapid development.

Tinubu who spoke at one-day parley between current speakers and deputy speakers of the APC led states with the theme: 'The Legislature, Changing times and Nigeria's Democratic Journey' hosted by Speaker of the Lagos State House of Assembly, Rt. Hon. Mudashiru Obasa described himself as that man Nigeria needs urgently to take charge of the wheel of progress.

According to Tinubu, Nigerians have the focus and boldness but doesn't know how to run the race and take charge of the wheel of progress, adding that , "development of the country is about thinking and doing, and I am ready to do that again.

"Nigeria needs me even as I need

Nigeria. Nigeria needs drastic courageous changes that will bring revenue and I am that courageous one it needs. I was raised to be courageous and this has been working for me. I want to bring same to bear as president of Nigeria. Accelerating development of our nation is about thinking and doing, and I am ready to do that again because I am a thinker and doer.

"I want to become president legitimately through the ballot but I reserve the right to brag. I started my teething age of politics in the Senate; I was the youngest and I did well. I am well educated, sound, brilliant, vibrant, and one of the best alumni of the Chicago State University. I was a student-tutor and one of the most sought-after graduates after school as I had five job offers even before graduation.

"In the face of tyranny and all odds, I have survived, stood and fought for democracy, survived exile, lived without family, while financing other pro-democracy groups. I have contributed to sustain Nigeria's democracy more than any other person. I am a very passionate being. I have contributed immensely more than any other person contesting today. I equally have it better when it comes to legislative experience, I am married to a senator and have allowed her practice her religion well."

Tinubu, who appealed to the lawmakers to back his ambition, added: "I am pushing and requesting for your support to be elected president of Nigeria in 2023. I am begging you to do me a favour so I can do Nigeria a favour. No one should leave here without a commitment to vote for me as a delegate. It is a very challenging time and we need to decide it right. I did not take any appointment so that I can assert my position.

"How many of my fellow contenders have my experience as governor, even of a governor, my caliber? I am the first governor to grant autonomy to the House of Assembly even as I am knowledgeable in legislative duties. I survived non-allocation of local government funds in Lagos, functioned and created jobs. We made progress out of adversity. Revenue generation, not allocation, has made Lagos the number one economy in Africa.

"Nigeria should not be an index of poverty, frustration, banditry, hooliganism, and the likes, but a country that we will all be proud of. We need to get it right.

"Nigeria needs me even as I need Nigeria. I will be a good example. I have the can-do spirit, I am confident, and I have never lost an election. I was raised to be courageous and this has been working for me.

"We can change the fortune of this country without giving excuses. I have demonstrated it in Lagos, and though people talk about traffic, but I tell you that if there is no good economy, there won't be traffic.

"We can rebuild this nation, reverse the carnage, but you need the visioner. I am the best visioner available and so I plead with you to decide well on who the APC candidate will be."

Subsequently, after thorough deliberations, the House adopted the recommendations of the Committee as the resolution of the House would be subjected to the amendment proposed in those areas.

LASG Urges Compliance With Safety Regulations In Schools

The Lagos State government has called on management of public and private schools in the state to adhere strictly to safety regulations through the Safe Schools Lagos initiative.

The director-general, Lagos State Safety Commission, Mr. Lanre Mojola, said this during the SSL workshop held in Alausa, Ikeja.

The event themed, 'Creating a safety culture and compliance,' was organised by the LSC in collaboration with the Office of Education Quality Assurance and SchoolRun Academy.

Mojola said, "The Safe Schools Lagos initiative is a programme aimed at ensuring a safer school environment for effective teaching and learning processes in formal and informal education centres across the state in line with the THEMES agenda of the present administration led by Governor Babajide Sanwo-Olu.

"SSLagos is designed to deepen safe practices, inculcate a culture of safety and promote self-compliance to safety regulations, standards and codes of practice in all tiers of learning, taking into consideration all stakeholders such as students, academic and non-academic staff, parents/guardians, visitors to the premises and the entire neighbourhood."

The Director-General, OEQA, Mrs Abiola Seriki-Ayeni, lauded the collaboration to ensure safety for all schools in the state.

Environment: Lagos Taskforce Demolishes Illegal Mechanic Villages

As part of efforts to have a serene, safe and secured environment based on the existing master plan of the state, the Lagos State Environmental and Special Offences Unit (Taskforce) has demolished two illegal mechanic villages and evicted its occupants.

The villages which were located at Festac, opposite Area E Police Station and Maroko powerlines under high tension cables were cleared as part of the state governments commitment and effort to safeguard the lives of its citizenry and beautify the state.

The clearing up exercise which took place simultaneously was supervised by the chairman of the Agency, Shola Jejeloye, a Chief Superintendent of Police who disclosed that series of warnings and notices were served to the illegal occupants of both locations but they were adamant to relocate, hence the need for the agency to take the drastic measure to save the state from environmental degradation.

The chairman stated that the exercise was necessary to further help beautify the state and also reduce the habitat of street urchins and hoodlums who usually make use of such locations as a safe haven after perpetrating crimes and nefarious activities in town.

"Countless warnings have been served to operators of the illegal mechanic villages which were sometimes being used as hide-out or shield for criminal elements on different occasions, but with this new development criminality would be reduced to the barest minimum.

Nigerians Want Jonathan To Declare For Presidency – Survey

BY MOSES ORJIME, Abuja

A nationwide survey has shown that despite his silence, Nigerians are eager to see former President Goodluck Jonathan to declare his intention to run for country's foremost office in 2023.

The study conducted by a political interest research group, Fourth Dimension Cloud Poll (4-DCP) indicated that there were behind the scenes in the political circles that Nigerians of different ethnic extraction, political organisations and power brokers among major political parties are waiting for Jonathan to publicly declare his interest for the race.

This was revealed yesterday in Abuja in a second quarter special report (1) signed by the lead researcher, Dr. Richard Audi.

He said, "Based on coordinated research undertaken by our field specialists to determine Nigeria's political direction and Nigerians' expectations in the 2023 presidential election with special reference to behind the scene happenings among political parties, groups, ethnic and religious groups and the permutation is obviously in favour of former President Goodluck Ebele Jonathan (GEJ).

"The political actors are all waiting. Leaders of ethnic nationalities and religious groups have expressed their willingness to lay aside every difference and work with GEJ because he is a man of peace and he can also be trusted," he stated.

The report further said, "One thing that is not, however, certain in the behind the scene engagement, among political actors is the final outcome of the entire permutations, and that is, whether Jonathan will eventually succumb to pressure, accept and declare to run."

There have been reports that certain persons in President Muhammadu Buhari administration and the leadership of the ruling All Progressive Congress (APC) have been putting pressure on Jonathan to publicly accept to succeed Buhari.

It is also believed that the cabal and the former president are trying to iron out grey areas in the conditions given by Jonathan.

2023: Afenifere Faults Baba-Ahmed’s Attack On Adebajo

BY TOPE FAYEHUN, Akure

Pan-Yoruba socio-political group, Afenifere, has faulted the comments of the Northern Elders Forum (NEF) director of Publicity and Advocacy, Dr Hakeem Baba-Ahmed, on its leader’s views on the forthcoming presidential election.

Baba-Ahmed had said they were not moved by Adebajo’s warning that any attempt by a northerner to succeed President Muhammadu Buhari in 2023 would spell doom for Nigeria.

Reacting in a statement issued in Akure, the Ondo State capital, the Secretary-General of Afenifere, Chief Sola Ebiseni, said, “It is clear that Baba-Ahmed and those he claims to speak for are only dwelling in their myopic and minority positions about Nigeria and its politics.

Ebiseni stressed that “In these perilous times, when men and women of goodwill are in, utmost sobriety, in search of solutions to its myriads of challenges, it is surprising that the likes of Hakeem Baba-Ahmed would not appreciate the concerns of an elder statesman like Chief Ayo Adebajo, on the need for the requisite political engineering that will serve to detonate the several time bombs.”

He added that, “Baba-Ahmed’s unprovoked vituperations on a man, his father’s age mate, is strange and an eloquent testimony of his imported culture.”

According to him, “Patriotic view, expressed within the context of a deep analysis of the country’s political history, that Hakeem Baba-Ahmed, in his characteristic uncouth language, dismissed as a laughable threat targeted at the North (his North) which he said would continue to vote according to the dictates of its interests.

“Afenifere noted the laughable crocodile tears of Baba-Ahmed and his group on the current pervasive and intractable state of insecurity in Nigeria and the call for the resignation of President Buhari as if any clear-thinking Nigerian is so impressed.”

The governor performed the flagging off ceremony in Rinze, the headquarters of Akwanga West Development Area, on Thursday.

RAAMP is aimed at providing access roads to rural farmers and ensuring the provision of market infrastructural fa-

The rural project, which is being jointly funded by the World Bank and the Federal Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development, will cut across all the 13 local government areas of the state and is expected to be completed in two years.

The Rinze-Mintibi Madaki road which was flagged off by the governor is however expected to be completed in 12 month. Engineer Sule disclosed that, as part of the first phase of the project, three markets were equally selected from each of the senatorial districts of the state, as focal points for agro-logistic intervention.

He noted that the project was in line with the thrust of his administration towards the construction of urban and rural roads in the state aimed at opening vista of opportunities for socio-economic activities to thrive.

“This is intended to enhance inter-connectivity between the rural and urban centres, as well as facilitating the transportation of agricultural products and other commodities from the remote areas to markets in the urban centres,”

While admitting that farmers in Nasarawa State continue to face challenges which include lack of access roads, storage and processing facilities, Sule said his administration quickly keyed into the RAAMP project in order to diversify the agricultural sector for socioeconomic development.

According to the governor, though the RAAMP has been in existence for long, this is the first time Nasarawa state is benefiting from the project.

He however charged the contractor handling the project to deliver quality.

Finding The Right CEO

Minorities and women are badly underrepresented in all four of the main CEO stepping-stone roles.

The best stepping-stone to the corner office is changing. The vast majority of new CEOs still come from within: For example, in 2020, 77% of new S&P 500 CEOs were internal promotions. But whereas 20 years ago chief operating officers were the overwhelming favorites, accounting for 76% of such appointments, they have lost significant ground and look to be overtaken soon by another group of aspirants: division heads. According to a new study, however, neither cohort is the most likely to deliver outstanding results. “Leapfrog CEOs”—leaders appointed from one level below C-suite officers or division heads, with titles such as senior vice president and general manager—have the best odds of steering their firms into the top quartile of performers.

A New Focus on Complexity and Opportunity

As part of a large ongoing study of CEOs, researchers from the executive recruiting and leadership advisory firm Spencer Stuart analyzed every CEO succession in the S&P 500 since 2000. The waning numbers of COOs tapped for the top job reflect changing strategic priorities, they say. “The role of COO was popularized in the 1990s as a result of management trends around quality—kaizen, total quality management, Six Sigma, and so on, when the leadership emphasis was on operations,” explains Claudius Hildebrand, the head of CEO data and analytics at Spencer Stuart and a coauthor of the study. But in recent years companies have become flatter, and power has moved from functions to business units. What’s more, boards have come to prioritize experience running a full P&L. “Divisional leadership positions combine the benefits of managing complexity with the experience of spotting opportunity and market trends,” Hildebrand says.

In 2020—the last full year for which data is available—chief operating officers accounted for 38% of new CEOs in the S&P 500. Division heads were only two percentage points behind them, at 36%. Chief financial officers were next, at 9%. CFOs appeal to boards that want to ensure continuity, because they often serve as right hand to the CEO. Leapfrog candidates—the final group with significant representation in the study—accounted for roughly 5% of new chief executives.

Having identified where successors came from, the study looked at company performance after they assumed the CEO role. The researchers sorted the executives into quartiles based on their company’s market-adjusted total shareholder returns. The least-common choice, the leapfrogs, had the highest share of CEOs in the top quartile for performance: 41%. Former division heads and COOs were next, at 27% and 25%, while the share of CFOs in the top quartile of performers was only 8%. Leapfrogs were also less likely than CFOs—ostensibly a safer pick—to end up in the bottom quartile, despite their lack of C-suite experience. The patterns were consistent after controlling for industry differences as well as organizational and market attributes and for pre-Covid performance.

Although the researchers didn’t quantitatively analyze reasons for leapfrogs’ superior performance, they have some theories based on follow-up interviews and their consulting experience. In assessing candidates—even at the CEO level—it’s often better to value skills and ability over experience, they contend. “When directors choose a leapfrog, they are choosing potential,” says Robert Stark, a colead of Spencer Stuart’s CEO succession advisory services and a contributor to the study. “They are betting that the candidate has the capacity to do much more than they’ve already demonstrated. It speaks to what sort of game you’re playing as a board: Are you playing to win, or are you playing to not lose?”

This isn’t to say that boards should elevate only leapfrogs. “We could point to highly successful CEOs from every role,” Stark emphasizes. “Each CEO succession is different.” Instead, the study’s findings indicate that boards should build relationships deeper down in their organizations—something few have traditionally done. Indeed, a 2014 study by the Conference Board, the Institute of Executive Development, and Stanford’s Rock Center for Corporate Governance found that most board members lack detailed knowledge of the skills, capabilities, and performance of executives even one level below the CEO. Only about half of the directors surveyed reported understanding the strengths and weaknesses of those executives very well or well. And rarely—in just 7% of companies responding—was a board member formally assigned to liaise with them. Talent further down in the organizations gets even less attention. “Boards need to be actively participating in their organizations’ talent development process,” Hildebrand says. “They need to know the unlikely candidates just as well as the likely candidates and expand their consideration set of potential CEOs.”

The researchers believe that a more expansive approach to the succession search could benefit firms in another way: by boosting their diversity, equity, and inclusion efforts. Minorities and women are badly underrepresented in all four of the main CEO stepping-stone roles, but they are more common at the leapfrog level.

Getting to the Next Level

Finally, the researchers hope their work will help executives as they develop the capabilities and experience needed for the top job. After conducting a meta-analysis of 100 CEO aspirants, the study identified development opportunities for leaders in each of the stepping-stone roles: COOs can best position themselves for success by building a following across the organization and being more visibly present to the broader workforce, and division heads should expand their vision and understanding of the business at the enterprise level by, for instance, volunteering for companywide projects. CFOs will probably benefit from gaining operating experience outside finance, while those in leapfrog positions should seek exposure to analysts, investors, board members, and other external stakeholders.

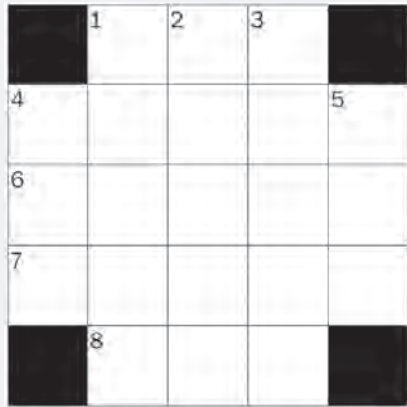

Ideally, firms’ talent-development process would provide such opportunities, says Seonaid Charlesworth, a Spencer Stuart consultant and one of the study’s coauthors. “In reality,” she adds, “CEO aspirants may need to seek them elsewhere, by making lateral moves inside or even outside the firm if they feel blocked in their current role.” For the time being, heading up a corporate division is most likely to put a candidate in a prime position to become CEO.

How Much Should You Spend On A Bridal Shower Gift?

If your friend or family member is getting ready to walk down the aisle, you may have received an invitation to their bridal shower. A bridal shower is the perfect opportunity to celebrate the bride-to-be as they get ready for their upcoming nuptials. And typically, where there’s a party, there’s also the opportunity to give gifts. While attending a bridal shower for your BFF or your cousin is certainly a time to party, it can also be confusing for some guests. Do you have to bring a gift if you plan to attend? And how much? Opperman to get all the answers you need. Read on to find out how much you should be budgeting for a gift, along with other bridal shower gift etiquette and tips to keep in mind.

Bridal Shower Gift Etiquette

First thing’s first, if you’ve received an invitation to a bridal shower, are you required to show up with a gift? In short, yes. Showing up empty-handed would be considered a faux pas. „According to traditional etiquette, you should purchase a gift when attending a bridal shower,” says Opperman. „The only time you should not bring something is if the bride-to-be requested no presents.“

But what if you received an invitation and you’re unable to attend the shower? This is where the gift-giving options differ. „It is customary to send something still even if you do not attend the shower,” says Opperman. „That being said, you are not obligated to send a shower gift.“ If you’re not able to be there in person, consider sending a handwritten card sharing your well wishes and excitement for the couple or bride-to-be.

How Much to Spend on a Bridal Shower Gift

Navigating the options for bridal shower gifts can be tricky, but there are a few tips to help guide you. According to Opperman, bridal shower gifts tend to be less expensive than wedding gifts. „Many people spend around $50 to $75, whereas closer friends and family may spend upwards of $100,” she says. „However, the amount you want to spend is up to you.“

It’s important to consider that there are no set rules for gift-giving when it comes to bridal shower gifts, and items can certainly range in price. Another important factor to consider? Keep your own budget in mind with your choice of gift. Chances are, you’ll be wrapping up a wedding gift as well, so finding a balance between the two may be helpful. You may choose to give a smaller, less expensive gift for the shower if you’re planning to select a pricier wedding gift from the couple’s registry.

Overall, what’s most important is finding something meaningful or useful to celebrate your friend or family member’s upcoming wedding. „The bride-to-be will appreciate anything you give her,” adds Opperman.

Bridal Shower Gift Tips

If you’re stuck on what exactly to give as a bridal shower gift, the options certainly range in price point. In addition, some bridal shower gifts may be more personal for the bride as opposed to gifts chosen from a registry.

If the bridal shower has a specific theme (which is often listed on the invitation) it will give you a jumping-off point for your gift. A lingerie shower will offer a fun opportunity to wrap up lingerie or sleepwear, whereas the invitation for a, Stock the Bar shower may request wine, spirits, and other barware to fill out the couple’s home bar. A spa or self-care-themed shower may be the perfect opportunity to gift a set of luxurious bath bombs or a cozy robe.

If there’s no theme, then stick to useful items, whether that be for the home, for pampering, or even something for the bride to utilize on their wedding day such as a personalized hanger or makeup bag. And if all else fails, look to the registry. „Most couples set up a wedding registry, which makes it easier as you can choose the gift from there,” says Opperman. Remember, it’s there for a reason! Items from the registry such as fine china, glassware, and towels always make great gifts to celebrate the upcoming big day.

NITDA, NASENI Partner To Implement NANONASENI Tech & CertVeri System

Empowered by section 6 of its enabling Act to regulate all information technology matters within the country and mandated to clear all Information Technology (IT) Projects in line with the policy objectives of the federal government towards maximising transparency and accountability in carrying out same by public institutions, the director general of National Information Technology Development Agency (NITDA) has given the nod to the collaboration request by the National Agency for Science and Engineering Infrastructure (NASENI); seeking to implement the NANONASENI Technology and the NASENI CertVeri System in Nigeria.

The DG NITDA, Kashifu Inuwa, CCIE, who affirmed the Agency's readiness to collaborate with NASENI, commended the organisation for coming up with the two innovative solutions.

"So we are ready to work with you to support you in any way to make sure we achieve this because achieving this initiative to us is like helping us also achieve our mandate. Anything you do to develop IT or strengthen the ecosystem translates to you helping us achieve our objective; So thank you very much".

While stressing professionalism as the watchword to getting the project underway, Inuwa described the initiatives as timely and called for immediate actions in its implementation.

According to the NITDA Boss, the proposed Special Purpose Vehicle, SPV company, known as NANONASENI and the NASENI CertVeri System, would lead to revenue generation for the country and boost the sector's contribution to the Nation's GDP, among other benefits.

He advised NASENI also to consider engaging the Nigerian Communications Commission (NCC), Association of Licensed Telecommunications Operators of Nigeria (ALTON), and other organizations who may have already indicated an interest in the technology as this would speed up the realization and acceptance of the creative works.

"They need to also join in conceptualising the initiative; this is important because we all want all critical stockholders to have a sense of belonging"

The DG, while assuring the team of NITDA's commitment to supporting the development of the projects, noted that it is in line with President Muhammadu Buhari's administration priority of diversifying the economy and stimulating creativity in Nigerians.

Inuwa lauded the Buhari administration, which he observed has initiated multiple initiatives that have challenged the status-quo and affected socio-economic activities and improved the livelihoods of millions of Nigerians.

Speaking earlier, the executive vice-chairman and chief executive officer of NASENI, Prof. Mohammed Sani Haruna, informed the DG that the agency intends to initiate, develop, test, and launch the NASENI CertVeri System, which he believes would allow the Federal Government to offer Nigerians professional and integrated certificate and document verification services simultaneously anywhere, anytime, and whenever needed; particularly embassies across the globe.

Prof. Haruna explained that the system would provide integration between NASENI and selected Ministries, Departments, and Agencies (MDAs) for relevant data sharing.

"The purpose of helping other organisations or institutions verify documents and authenticate them for persons in real-time is because it will deploy IoT to eliminate document faking and enhance credibility and authenticity."

While soliciting for collaboration with NITDA, the EVC said the mission is to critically engage on the needed solutions to problems of internet fraud, cybercrimes, terrorism attacks, insecurity, and certificate forgeries; matters he noted have been challenging, not only in Nigeria but nations around the world.

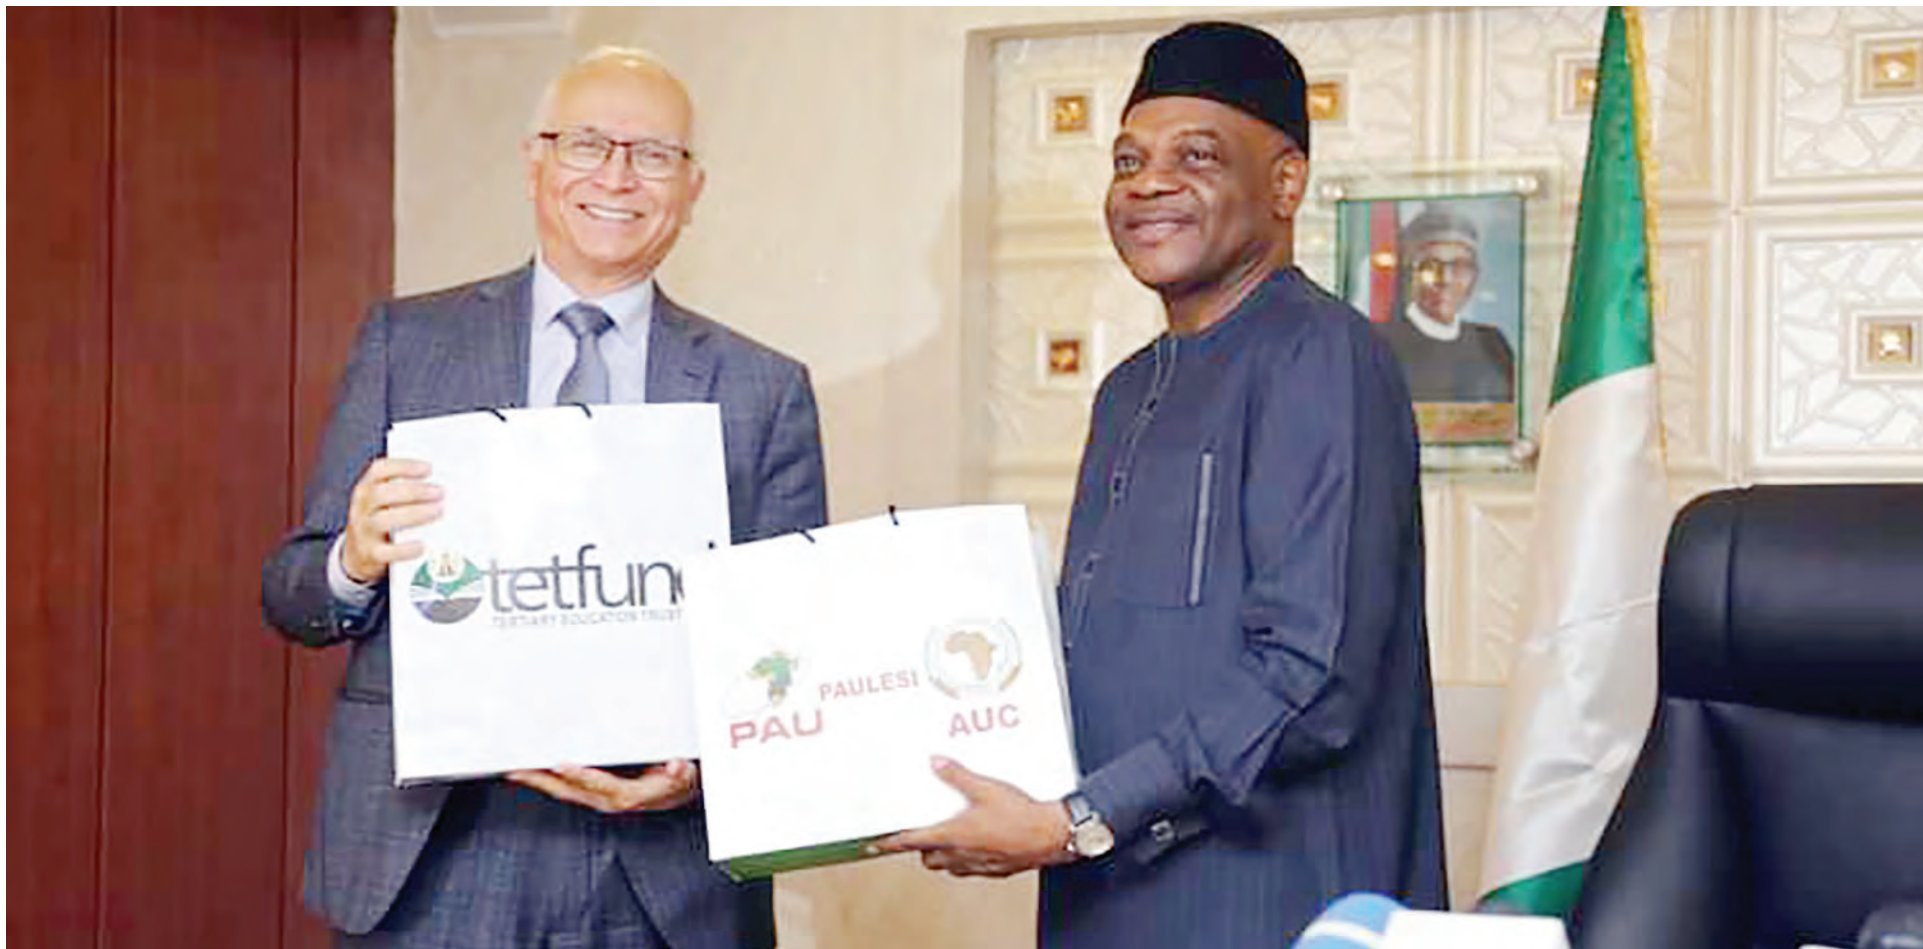

He expressed the hope that the collaboration, as with others to be forged, would be instrumental in implementing the two projects.

TETFund: Striving For Unity, Development In Africa

TETFund executive secretary, Arc. Sonny Echono received the African Union Commissioner for Education, Science, Technology and Innovation, Prof. Mohammed Belhocine and his entourage at the Fund's Headquarters in Abuja recently.

BY HENRY TYOHEMBA

The question of African unity has dominated the political and intellectual discourse for quite a while. Greater African unity has long been a cherished but delicate goal.

Although, there is a renewed drive to establish closer economic and political ties among the continent's numerous countries in recent times, the need for all hands to be on deck towards actualising the unity and development in Africa cannot be overemphasised.

Based on the heightened need for regional integration and a clearer understanding, the Tertiary Education Trust Fund (TETFund), recently expressed its readiness to forge a relationship with the Pan African University (PAU) agenda and that of the university forward.

The main objective of the partnership is to bring young Africans together in order to help create the real idea of Pan Africanism in them.

TETFund executive secretary, Architect Sunny Echono, while playing host to a team of the African Union Commission for Education, led by Prof Mohammed Belhocine, the Commissioner for Education who came on a courtesy visit said the Nigerian Government has also been working to promote technology noting that the country is in the process of establishing a national institute in Abuja.

"I should also let you know that the government of Nigeria actually thinks in that direction promoting technology and we are in the process of establishing a national institute here in Abuja. There will be a post graduate institution intended to promote the technological transformation of our country," he said.

"The Pan African University also fits into this general framework and we believe the partnership will be there for us to be able to learn one or two things to attract values to the faculties. It will also be a huge opportunity for scholars to troop into the university."

"I like to assure you that within the framework that we have, we will give you the maximum support to make that building functional and be put to use quickly."

Speaking on the request for construction of more classrooms and procurement of laboratory equipment for the Pan African University at the University of Ibadan, Architect Echono gave assurance that the request would be attended to.

"I am aware because I have had a different brief on the subject, the relationship at the University of Ibadan and the sequencing of your request.

"But I can assure you that as soon as we get the request, having done the most important thing of starting, we should be able to build on that and also forge the right partnership that will encourage or enable us to push the agenda of the African union and indeed the institution forward."

Speaking earlier, Prof Mohammed Belhocine said the Pan African University needed some assistance from the TETFund in terms of more classrooms, laboratory equipment and other areas.

He commended the work TETFund has done for the Commission earlier in March, the building housing the Pan African University at the University of Ibadan was commissioned saying, "that wouldn't have been possible without your support."

"We are very grateful for that. We are sure that it will create better working conditions for our Pan African University and Nigeria has been one of the advocates for the creation of this university which is now 10 years of existence," Prof. Belhocine said.

"There are four institutes in Africa which we are operating. One in West Africa in Ibadan, another in East Africa which is in Nairobi, the other one in North Africa which is Algeria. We have one also which deals with governance and humanities, social science in Yaunde, Cameroon Central Africa."

"And we are yet to launch the last one which is the space sciences in South Africa. Some discussion about privileges and immunities and we hope we will submit it soon as the 5th institute."

Prof Belhocine disclosed that at a meeting with the Minister of Education it was agreed that either the Ministry or the TETFund should write a letter to the University of Ibadan.

"We held a meeting yesterday with the Minister of Education and we discussed with responsible people over there. And Mr. Buhari was with us yesterday. And it was agreed that Tetfund or the Ministry of Education will write a letter to the University of Ibadan.

Sometimes, the management University of Ibadan is reluctant to send a request which is not related to their own interests if I may say. So our request is stalled there," he said

He explained that the Pan African University is very important, noting that it brings young Africans together. "So far thanks to the foreign institutes that are already operating. We were able to join more than 1,500 masters in different areas of focus. And more 400 PhDs were trained. And these people come from 50 nationalities."

"That is, the most important thing for us is not technical performance measurement.

"It is how we are bringing young Africans together. And when you bring them together for about three to five years, it means they happen to know each other better than in cultures, languages and the beliefs of the African countries. And this will create the real idea of Pan Africanism. It will become part of them," he added.

Sen Barau Hails Buhari Over New Polytechnic In Kano

BY HENRY TYOHEMBA

The chairman senate committee on appropriation, Senator Jibrin Barau, has commended President Muhammadu Buhari for citing one of the three newly-approved federal polytechnics in Kano State.

Barau, who represents Kano north senatorial district under All Progressive Congress (APC), expressed faith that the new polytechnic will expand access to education for the people of the state.

The federal government had in a statement by the director of press and public relations, Ministry of Education, Ben Goong, announced the approval of three new federal polytechnics by President Buhari.

According to the statement, the three federal polytechnics would be situated in Abia, Delta and Kano states.

It noted that the establishment of the new polytechnics was in line with Buhari's determination to make tertiary education more accessible.

Adamu

The statement read: "In line with his determination to make tertiary education more accessible, President Muhammadu Buhari has approved the establishment of three new Federal Polytechnics in the country.

"The new Institutions are to commence academic activities in October 2022. This brings to 36 the number of Federal Polytechnics in the country. All States of the Federation now have one Federal Polytechnic each."

Meanwhile, Barau has pledged the "cooperation of the state government and people of the state with the federal government to ensure smooth take-off of the new polytechnic in October."

Tackling Learning Crisis In Nigeria's Basic Education

With the Nigerian education system reportedly facing a deep learning crisis, experts have called for tactical approaches to improving learning outcomes in school children. HENRY TYOHEMBA writes.

Nigeria is experiencing a learning crisis in which 70 percent of 10-year-olds cannot understand a simple sentence or perform basic numeracy tasks, according to the World Bank recent statistics.

This has become a big problem given that children who are currently in school are not even learning, aside from the rising number of out of school children which runs in millions.

Paraphrasing the words of the vice president Yemi Osinbajo, Nigeria is facing a learning crisis, where millions of children and young people are not developing even the basic skills required of them to escape poverty.

Perturbed by this, education experts have therefore warned that the country is experiencing a decline in learning outcomes among children between 3 and 10 years old and need urgent steps to get the country out of danger.

Speaking at a media dialogue organised by United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) and the Child Rights Information Bureau of the federal ministry of information, Dr Geoffrey Njoku, the organisation's communication specialist said addressing the crisis in Nigeria's education must start with ensuring that the country is on the right path with foundation literacy and numeracy.

He said Nigeria has an alarming record of 10.5 million out-of-school children, 70 per cent of those who are in school are not learning or do not know anything, while saying that teachers who do not understand the basics of some of the knowledge are expected to be imparted to the school children.

He added that several of these teachers lack the prerequisite training required for the teaching process. "The teachers need to be trained and re-trained; we have teachers failing primary 3 exams, so what are we doing. At this point, if we need to change the school curriculum then let's do that to achieve improved learning for the children."

He further said the success of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG), is tied to the implementation of the Child Rights Act. "This is because if we don't focus on getting the child rights right, it is going to be a hollow chase because all the SDGs are all intertwined with child rights."

To Manar Ahmed, UNICEF education specialist, the poor quality of teachers who ought to administer the knowledge to the children is also contributing to the crisis. Ahmed who referenced the 2018 Personnel Audit conducted by the Universal Basic Education Commission (UBEC), which confirmed that many basic schools in Nigeria are lacking in adequate teachers and other facilities needed to impact knowledge on the people, expressed worry over what she described as an unprepared workforce laden with insufficient physical resources in schools across the country.

She also stressed the need for the country to put in more effort to ensure that programs are implemented to improve the learning process among school children. She said:

"Goal four of the SDGs is to ensure inclusive and equitable quality education that promotes lifelong learning and all children by age 10 must know how to read and solve numeracy. It is not that Nigeria lacks the right policy but Nigeria is facing a staggering crisis with learning outcomes being one of the lowest." "So, 70 per cent of the children in school are not achieving basic foundational skills."

Also speaking, the chief of the UNICEF field office in Kano, Rahama Farah, revealed that the international organisation and the federal government have continued to collaborate with the aim of improving the outcome of basic education in the country.

Moniepoint Targets 41m SMEs With New MFB Licence

BY CHIMA AKWAJA AND ROY-AL IBEH, Lagos

Moniepoint, the largest point of sale (PoS) acquirer in Nigeria, has secured a micro finance bank (MFB) licence to evolve into a full business bank.

Moniepoint, owned by TeamApt, one of Nigeria's leading fintechs since 2019 has enabled 162,000 small business owners to process over a billion transactions worth N23 trillion. Now with the its MFB licence, it is targeting Nigeria's 41 million small businesses who struggle with managing operations, taxes, insurance, and staff welfare.

To solve for that and power the dreams of small and medium enterprises (SMEs), Moniepoint has evolved into a business bank. In addition to their already solid payments solution, this expansion of Moniepoint enables Nigerians to grow their business with access to quick loans, manage operations, payroll, and staff welfare, and protect the business with affordable premiums.

Small businesses are referred to as the bedrock of the economy for a reason. SMEs employ 84per cent of the country's entire workforce and contribute 48 per cent to Nigeria's GDP. Their success is critical to the economie progress of the nation. TeamApt founder and CEO, Tosin Eniolorunda said "As Nigerians, we feel the challenges of the economy acutely, in real-time. This is why we have worked hard to evolve into a business bank that truly works for the everyday Nigerian business owner.

"Moniepoint in addition to being a tech-enabled all-in-one business solution is also able to provide much needed last-mile service delivery. This is in line with our mission to power the business dreams of Africa's real economy, and provide financial happiness to all," saidEniolorunda.

PMB Confirms Abdulaziz As TCN MD/CEO

BY NSE ANTHONY-UKO, Abuja

President Muhammadu Buhari has confirmed Engr. Dr. Sule Ahmed Abdulaziz as the substantive managing director/chief executive officer of Transmission Company of Nigeria (TCN), with effect from April 4, 2022.

TCN general manager, Public Affairs, Ndidi Mbah who made this known yesterday, noted that Abdulaziz's confirmation is coming after almost two year of running the TCN in acting capacity, having been appointed on May 19, 2020.

As acting MD/CEO, he was responsible for the overall supervision of the affairs of TCN, including transmission projects, transmission network operations and maintenance, system operations, market administration, human resources management and as the chief accounting officer.

Mbah said that under his watch as the Ag. MD/CEO, TCN made milestone achievements in projects execution and delivery, stable grid management, and human resources management that optimised personnel performance and productivity.

"Working with an executive management consisting of four executive directors, Engr Abdulaziz embarked on projects initiatives and execution that significantly transformed TCN from a faltering successor company in the post-privatization era to a viable national and sub-regional transmission company.

'NCAA Awaiting Security Clearance For Nigeria Air Operators Certificate Application'

BY BABALOLA YUSUF, Lagos

The director general of the Nigerian Civil Aviation Authority (NCAA), Capt. Musa Nuhu, on Wednesday, said the proposed national carrier, Nigeria Air is going through the processes of obtaining Air Operator Certificate (AOC) from the agency.

Nuhu, in an interview with journalists in Lagos, further disclosed that the agency was awaiting security clearance for the airline.

He also disclosed that the regulatory authority could not be specific on when the airline would be issued AOC to commence as a scheduled operator, saying that this would be determined by the performance of the airline at its various stages.

He said, "The only thing I can tell you is that the promoters of that airline have applied for AOC and their AOC is ongoing. I don't have any assurances of when the licenses would be. You see, when you apply for AOC or any certification, some issues like seeking security clearances for applicants are not completely under the purview of NCAA, security agencies do that.

"I don't have a control over security agencies to give such clearances. They have applied and it is ongoing, we are waiting for security clearance."

LEADERSHIP report that there are five stages of AOC acquisition by impending airlines. The five stages are pre-application phase, which entails initial enquiry or request about NCAA's certification; obtaining of Civil Aviation Regulations (CAR) and formal application (second phase) for intending entrant where documents and manuals (including the curricula vitae of key management personnel) must be submitted for evaluation. The minimum timeframe for the formal application phase is two weeks.

Senate Passes Revised 2022 Fiscal Framework Today

BY SUNDAY ISUWA, Abuja

The Senate will today Thursday, pass the revised 2022 fiscal framework before adjourning on the Easter break.

The hint was given by the Senate president, Ahmad Lawan, after the report of the Committee on Finance was stepped down today for consideration.

The Senate leader, Yahaya Abdullahi, who moved a motion for the report to be stepped down, explained that its deferred consideration till tomorrow, Thursday, April 14, 2022, would allow lawmakers make their inputs.

President Buhari, in the letter dated 5th April, 2022, requested the Senate to adjust the 2022 fiscal framework.

He said doing so became necessary in view of new developments in both the global and domestic economies.

According to him, the developments were occasioned by spikes in the market price of crude oil, which were a fallout of the Russian-Ukraine war.

He, therefore, requested the upper chamber to approve an increase in the oil benchmark by US$11 per barrel, from US$62 per barrel to US$73 per barrel.

The president also sought a reduction in the projected oil production volume by 283,000 barrels per day, from 1.883 million barrels per day to 1.600 million barrels per day.

He also the chamber to approve an increase in the estimated provision for PMS subsidy for 2022 by N3.557 trillion, from N442.72 billion to N4.00 trillion.

Anyim, Mohammed, Saraki Intensify Lobby For PDP Ticket

BY CHIBUZO UKAIBE, Abuja

Ahead of the Presidential primaries of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) former Senate President, Pius Anyim and Bauchi state governor, Bala Mohammed, yesterday stepped up their campaigns for the party's presidential ticket as they met with some critical organs of the party.

The aspirants who separately met with the party's National Working Committee (NWC), Board of Trustees (BoT), and former ministers forum, gave insights into their plans if they win the party's ticket and eventually emerge president.

Anyim, in a meeting with the National Working Committee (NWC), said he will turn the country's fortunes around within a year.

"As part of our political consolidation process, we shall provide a platform for broad-based consultations and frank dialogue on a generally acceptable new foundation for our nation.

"We shall put the machinery in place to harvest the views and secure the buy-in of all components of our polity and build consensus on the structure of the federation, an acceptable governance system and benchmark agreed national aspiration to which all shall commit. We shall deploy a visionary leadership style that shall respond to the aspirations of the people," he said.

Bala Mohammed who also met the NWC said: "As somebody who traversed all the constituencies of the public service, the civil service, the National Assembly and indeed, the media, with all these experiences, we have built bridges. I'm a team player. I can only lead and Nigeria needs leadership."

Earlier, Mohammed told the forum of former PDP governors that he would drop his Presidential ambition if former President Goodluck Jonathan decided to join the race.

He also promised to run a knowledge based administration. On his part, Saraki, who met with the PDP Board of Trustees (BoT), said the country needs a president who understands the dimension of the crisis facing the country just as he lamented that the county is broke.

26 PDP, APC Guber Aspirants Jostle To Succeed Wike In Rivers

BY ANAYO ONUKWUGHA, Port Harcourt

No fewer than 26 governorship aspirants on the platform of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) and the All Progressives Congress (APC) are jostling to succeed Rivers State Governor, Nyesom Ezenwo Wike, come May 29, 2023. Wike, who is currently running his second term in office, recently declared his interest to contest for Presidency on the platform of the PDP.

Out of the number of governorship aspirants, 15 are running on the platform of the PDP, while 11 are running on the platform of the APC.

LEADERSHIP learnt that the number of governorship aspirants on the PDP platform may increase before the April 14, 2023 deadline for purchase of forms.

Those who had already purchased forms under the PDP banner include the secretary to the Rivers State Government, Dr. Tammy Danagogo and former chairman of the party in the state, Chief Felix Obuah as well as two serving members of the National Assembly, Senator George Sekibo and Hon. Farah Dagogo.

Also running are former Deputy Governor, Engr. Tele Ikuru, former Minister of Transport, Dr. Abiye Sekibo, Accountant-General of the state, Siminalaye Fubara, and former Commissioner for Finance, Hon. Isaac Kamalu as well as former Deputy Speaker of the House of Representatives, Chief Austin Opara.

2023: Olawepo-Hashim Set To Declare Bid, Warns Against Voting Corrupt Politicians

BY CHIBUZO UKAIBE, Abuja

Chieftain of the ruling party, All Progressive Congress (APC) Mr. Gbenga Olawepo-Hashim, has urged Nigerians against electing a president who has made a career of living on government since 1999, adding that such a person won't make any positive changes in the country.

In a chat with newsmen, the former presidential candidate said, "The truth is that some of those who have stayed too long in the status quo have become part of the corrupt system, and it is an illusion to expect Corruption to fight Corruption."

He added, "either in the APC or PDP or any other party, those whose only job has been to change from one government office to another and have never done any other productive thing apart from squandering government money, driving convoys of cars around that they do not fuel themselves, escorted by security paid for by government, are far removed from the true realities of Nigeria, and are therefore incapable of comprehending the urgency and depth of transformation Nigeria needs.

"I laugh when I read about someone who has never set up even a barber shop in his or her life promising young people employment. These are people who do not even understand how businesses run" he said.

I Will Build On Govs Ishaku's Achievements – Kona

BY MOSES ORJIME, Abuja

A Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) governorship aspirant from Taraba state, Hon. Victor Bala Kona has promised to consolidate on the gains made by the present administration of Darius Ishaku in the state.

Speaking with journalists after he submitted his expression of interest and nomination forms at the PDP National headquarters, Kona, a former Taraba PDP state chairman, said the governor has handled the insecurity through his peace for development initiative.

He however denied that he was the anointed candidate to take over from the incumbent Governor.

"Nobody has anointed me;

it is only God that crown leaders. You can see the calibre of people that are with me on this project, from all the local government areas of the state and National Assembly members. This is to attest to the fact that I have support across the state.

"My campaign team is made up of various professionals, business leaders and other stakeholders."

On the issue of zoning, Kona clarified that as the immediate past Chairman of the party in the state it was zoning that produced the incumbent Governor, adding that based on the local arrangement all the stakeholders are now clamouring that the position should be zoned to the north.

2023: Women, Youths, PWDs To Get Free ADC Elective Forms

BY SUNDAY ISUWA, Abuja

The African Democratic Congress (ADC), yesterday declared free nomination forms to women, youths and Persons Living With Disabilities (PWD) for elective political offices at all levels in the 2023 general elections.

The ADC national chairman, Mr. Ralphs Nwosu, who stated this in Abuja, said the move became imperative to ensure the much needed inclusiveness for women, youths and PWDs in the governance of the country.

In a statement he issued, Nwosu said women, youths and PWD represent 75 per cent of the nation's population hence the need to mainstream them by giving them opportunity to contest elections into political positions.

He described the demography as critical stakeholders who with their unique characteristics and capacities are at a vantage position to contribute meaningfully to national development if given the enabling environment.

"Since the demography represents a critical mass of the nation's population, giving them opportunity to seek elective offices by removing financial inhibitions posed by high cost of nomination forms in most political parties in the country is ADC's contribution to the growth of the nation's democracy and development," Nwosu said.

He insisted that the gesture will throw up abundant human talents that otherwise would have been excluded from the governance space.

Imo Entrepreneur Tasks Kinsmen On Active Politics

ANGELA NKWO-AKPOLU, Imo

Imo based businessman, Eziefule Opara has called on Ngor Okpala people to shun back seat and contest political positions in the state.

Opara who contested for the Ngor Okpala State Constituency bye-election under the ruling All Progressive Congress (APC) lamented that the people prefer to play back roles and are later dumped after investing time and resources.

Speaking with newsmen in Owerri, he said "Am worried that Ngor Okpala people just like to take back seat and after investing in the electioneering process, we are schemed out for taking back seats. Now that people are buying forms, where are our people to contest, even if they lose, why are we so comfortable hiding behind others even to our collective detriment", he queried.

According to the Entrepreneur, a lot of people seeking elective positions do not measure up economically, financially, and mentally with Ngor Okpala people, noting that the constituency boasts of well-to-do and well-read people across the world.

Opara said "The electioneering process has begun and am yet to see anyone from Ngor Okpala seeking to contest Senate seat, everyone is just gravitating towards state Assembly Seat as though that is the only position available. I doubt anyone will seek to contest for office of the governor because of our playing background style".

Stop Playing Politics, Metuh Cautions EFCC

BY CHIBUZO UKAIBE, Abuja

Former national publicity secretary of the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP), Chief Olisa Metuh has cautioned the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC) to desist from partisan politics over the fight against corruption.

A statement by Metuh's special assistant, Ebiloma Abdullahi, said it was reacting to a report of a purported arraignment against the former PDP spokesman.

Abdullahi said, "Nothing exposes the desperation of the Economic and Financial Crimes Commission (EFCC) as a mere political weapon designed to use media trial and judicial harassment against certain individuals than this campaign to intimidate and detract Chief Metuh from active participation in politics.

"For the records, the Court of Appeal has in December 2020 dismissed Justice Okon Abang's judgement against Chief Metuh on grounds of manifest bias.

"Thereafter Chief Metuh's lawyers appealed to the Supreme Court for a discharge and acquittal on the merits of the case. This they did, notwithstanding that his earlier appeal at the Supreme Court for a no-case submission has still not been heard.

"It is trite law that no prosecution can ever be done while the appeal at this stage at the Supreme Court has not been heard and decided. Why then the drama and the widely publicised media trial of an arraignment? Is any person afraid of Chief Metuh's famed strategic and tactical political prowess? Who exactly is using the EFCC at this time.

W/Bank Retains Nigeria’s 2.5% GDP Projection, Cuts SSA’s To 3.6%

BY MARK ITSIBOR, Abuja

The World Bank has retained its growth forecast for Nigeria’s economy 2.5 per cent in 2022, even as it reduced growth prospects for the sub-Saharan Africa from 4.0 per cent to 3.6 per cent. As the sub-Saharan African economy struggles to recover from the 2020 recession induced by the COVID-19 (coronavirus) pandemic, the region now faces new economic growth challenges, compounded by the Russian invasion of Ukraine. The World Bank’s latest Africa’s Pulse, a biannual analysis of the near-term regional macroeconomic outlook, estimates growth at 3.6 percent in 2022, down from 4 percent in 2021 as the region continues to deal with new COVID-19 variants, global inflation, supply disruptions and climate shocks. Adding to the region’s growth challenges are rising global commodity prices, which are increasing at a faster pace since the onset of the conflict between Russia and the Ukraine. As top world exporters of food staples, Russia—the world’s largest exporter of fertilizers—and Ukraine account for a substantial share of wheat, corn and seed oil imports, all of which may be halted if the conflict persists. While Sub-Saharan economies are also likely to be impacted by tightening of global conditions and reduced foreign financial flows into the region, the analysis notes that the high fuel and food prices will translate into higher inflation across African countries, hurting poor and vulnerable citizens, especially those living in urban areas. One point of concern is the increased likelihood of civil strife as a result of food and energy-fueled inflation, particularly in this current environment of heightened political instability.

Senate Gives Customs N3.019trn Revenue Target, Approves N369.04bn 2022 Budget

BY SUNDAY ISUWA, Abuja

The Senate, yesterday, approved the sum of N369.04 billion as budget for the Nigeria Customs Service for the 2022 fiscal year. This was just as it earmarked a N3.019 trillion as revenue target for the Service in 2022. The budget approval followed the consideration of a report by the committee on Customs, Excise and Tariffs. The report was laid by the chairman, Senator Francis Alimikhen (Edo North).

Alimikhen, in his presentation, said out of the total expenditure of N369.04 billion approved for the NCS in 2022, N108.85 billion is for Personnel Cost; N45.89 billion for Overhead Cost; and N214.30 billion for Capital Cost. Giving a highlight of the NCS budget, he explained that the service in 2022 would implement the E-Customs project to include the automation of Customs agency licenses and Vehicle Identification Number. He stated that the NCS in collaboration with relevant government agencies would pursue improved internally generated revenue by implementing the 2021 Finance Act. According to the lawmaker, the excise duty of six per cent on telecommunication services and N10 per litre on carbonated drinks is expected to commence fully within the 2022 fiscal year. Out of the N3.019 trillion revenue target, Import Duty of N1.69 trillion; Excise Duty N161.69 billion; and N3.71 billion on fees and penalties are expected to be remitted to the Federation Account.

Afreximbank To Aid Nigeria’s Fuel Imports, Food Sufficiency From $4bn Ukraine Fund

BY BUKOLA IDOWU, Lagos

The African Export-Import Bank (Afreximbank) has disclosed that discussions are ongoing to assist the country from the $4 billion Ukraine Crisis Adjustment Trade Financing Programme for Africa (UKAFPA) launched earlier this month.

According to the bank, the move would help mitigate the impact of the food and fuel crises in Nigeria.

President and chairman of Afreximbank, Prof. Benedict Oramah, made the disclosure at a virtual news conference on the US$4 billion UKAFPA, which was launched on April 6, 2022.

It is a programme of credit facilities that the Bank had developed to manage the impacts of the Ukraine crisis on African economies and businesses. It was launched as programmed response to an urgent call for emergency intervention by member states of the bank.

UKAFPA-compliant financing requests received from across Africa already exceeds US$15 billion.

Oramah said the bank was also expanding its support to Nigeria in the areas of fuel importation, in addition to other provisions made earlier by the bank.

He said: “Nigeria is an African Union and Afreximbank member and should be able to access the facility as a member country.

“We supported fuel import and we are expanding that because there are urgent needs. There are discussions currently going on with regards to food also. We are supporting Nigeria. “We are living in an unprecedented time. Since two years, the world has been going through major challenges.

“The COVID-19 pandemic, which became a global challenge and crisis in the first quarter of 2020, is still raging.

“Again, early this year, the Ukraine crisis set in. The crisis was magnified by sanctions that had been placed and the fact that the war affects Ukraine in many other ways.”

According to him, Russia and Ukraine were the bread baskets of the world, producing most of the world’s wheat, corn, corn flour, and a number of food items.

Landwey investment, Nigeria’s foremost real estate investment company, and developers of the first Lifestyle and Wellness city in Nigeria, Isimi Lagos, has revealed its Isimi 2030 Master plan as it kicks off the colossal infrastructural project estimated at $142 million.

This announcement was made at the symposium recently organised and held at LandWey headquarters on Tuesday. The event started with a video reveal introduction detailing the Isimi Lagos Project, closely followed by comprehensive discussion with the guests in attendance.

The remarkable event which attracted industry players featured the official signing of the infrastructure partnership between Landwey and Zenith Construction Ltd ably represented by its Chairman, Antoine Moudaber. This collaboration will see the birth of numerous residential opportunities for the real estate eco-

Executive Order 5: NOTAP Intensifies Drive For Indigenous Software Devt

BY INNOCENT ODOH, ABUJA

The National Office For Technology Acquisition and Promotion (NOTAP) has intensified efforts to boost indigenous software development in Nigeria in line with the implementation of the Presidential Executive Order No.5 (EO5).

The EO5, which was signed into law by President Muhammadu Buhari on February 2, 2018, was premised on the need to promote Nigeria’s software developers and exploit their immense talents in the ICT sector which in recent times contributed 17.9 per cent to the GDP of Nigeria.

During a media chat on public presentation of an indigenous software for implementation of the EO5, in Abuja yesterday, the director general of NOTAP, Dr. Dan-Azumi Mohammed Ibrahim, said that the EO5 is to set the nation on the path of viable and sustainable economic growth with rapid transformation using the instruments and platform of Science Technology and Innovation (STI).

He noted that it is key to improving local content in public procurement with Science, Engineering and Technology components.

The “Presidential Executive Order 5 For Planning and Execution of Projects, Promotion of Nigerian Content in Contracts on Science, Engineering and Technology “is aimed at ensuring that all “procuring authorities shall give preference to Nigerian companies and firms in the award of contracts, in line with the Public Procurement Act 2007,” he said. Driving this initiative, NOTAP engaged an indigenous IT firm - Cagewox.net limited that has within a price of N32 million, considered moderate by the agency, developed a robust central platform/database for the agency that captures, stores, analyses and provide search and reporting capacities on the profile and competencies (i.e. qualifications, certificates, experience achievements etc) of the Nigerian professionals in Science, Engineering and Technology related fields within the country and outside.

FG Commences Work On Document For Electric Vehicle Production, Usage

BY KINGSLEY ALU,ABUJA

The federal government through the National Automotive Design and Development Council (NADDCC) has commenced the process of developing a document that will highlight the action plan that is needed to achieve the scale of electric vehicle production and usage in Nigeria.

To this end, the NADDCC has set up a technical committee on electric vehicle development plan for the country.

The committee’s work is anchored on key thematic areas of the Nigerian Automotive Industry Development Plan (NAIDP) that include investment promotion, infrastructure development, standards, skills development and market development.

Director-general of the agency Jelani Aliyu, who is also the chairman of the committee said the agency has its sight on the African free trade bloc (AfCFTA) and if the country must be a major player in this market, a comprehensive development plan has become necessary as it will also enable the full scale local production of multiple brands of electric vehicles, in addition to ensuring their cost-effective ownership to be supported by establishing an effective ecosystem of charging infrastructure.

N4.8bn Fraud: EFCC Urges Court To Dismiss Ibeto Rights Suit

BY OLUGBENGA SOYELE, Lagos

The Economic and Financial Crimes Commission(EFCC) has urged a Rivers state High court sitting in Port Harcourt to dismiss a fundamental human rights suit filed by the chairman of Ibeto Cement, Cletus Ibeto against it and a businessman, Chief Daniel Chukwudozie. Ibeto had dragged the EFCC and Chukwudozie before the court through a Fundamental Rights Enforcement Suit, seeking to prevent the anti-graft agency from investigating allegations of fraud bordering on obtaining by false pretence the sum of N4.8 billion, forgery and criminal breach of trust brought against him by Dozzy Oil and Gas Limited. He is asking the court to declare that his harassment by the respondents is unlawful, that the court restrains the EFCC from arresting him and order them to pay him N500 million damages for his unconstitutional arrest. But in his response to the suit, the EFCC urged the court to dismiss the suit for lacking in merit. The commission submitted that the invitation and interview of the Applicant by its officers is quite lawful because there is a petition against him which alleges the commission of an economic and financial crime. The anti-graft agency alleged that investigation has unequivocally linked the Applicant with the commission of the offences of obtaining money under false pretences and forgery. It also urged the court to refuse the prayer of the Applicant for a perpetual injunction to restrain the EFCC because this would amount to the court lending itself as a shield against the investigation and possible prosecution of the Applicant for alleged criminal infractions.

AFAN Decries Rising Cost Of Farm Inputs Ass Wet Season Sets In

The Kaduna state chapter of the All Farmers Association of Nigeria (AFAN), has appealed to government for intervention in curbing the rising prices of fertiliser and other farm inputs.

AFAN Chairman in the state, Alhaji Nuhu Aminu, told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) on Wednesday in Zaria, that the appeal became necessary as preparations for the wet season farming had commenced.

Aminu said the rising cost of farm inputs, coupled with insecurity, was threatening food production in the country.

He appealed to state and federal governments, to ensure early distribution of inputs to farmers.

He also urged the federal government to roll out its planned e-Wallet initiative in April and early May.

This, according to him, will address the expected surge in price of the commodity when the rainy season fully sets in.

The chairman said that the prices of assorted fertiliser was now N20,000 per 50kg bag of NPK 20-15-15, as against N12,000, and GDA-PP now selling for N30,000 as against the N15,000 sold in April 2021.

Aminu added that 50Kg bag of urea now sold for N19,000, as against N11,000 in April 2021.

He added that the price of some herbicides that were sold at N1,200 in April 2021, but were now being sold at N2,500 Malam Halliru Hamza, a maize farmer, said that the increase in prices of farm inputs before the commencement of wet season farming was alarming.

Stakeholders Worry Over High Construction Cost, Taxation

BY ORJIME MOSES, Abuja

Stakeholders have expressed concern over the high cost of construction and taxation in Nigeria.

They made the observation in Abuja, at the “Construction Industry Roundtable”, on the Appropriation Act 2022.

The event co-hosted by the Nigerian Institute of Quantity Surveyors (NIQS), and the Federation of Construction Industry (FOCI), was themed: “Appropriation Act 2022 and the Outlook for Construction Industry”.

Speaking at the event, president of NIQS, Mr Olayemi Shonubi, said the aim of the forum was to bring in major players in the construction sector to identify major challenges in the industry and areas to engage government in advocacy to proffer solutions.

In addition, the forum would serve as a medium to engage government to make policy so as to make things easier for them in the sector.

Shonubi identified areas such as high level of taxation, prices in building/construction materials, and gassoline, uncondusive environment for investors and the energy crisis in general.

“The taxation for example is the major areas to all of us, how do we engage the legislators so that there is a way they can look at to reduce some of the burdened areas to favour Nigerians.

Group Lauds Executive Order 11 On Public Buildings Maintenance Implementation

BY ZAKA KHALIQ, Lagos

The International Facility Management Association(IFMA), Nigeria chapter, has lauded president Muhammadu Buhari on his assent to Executive Order 11 on National Public Buildings Maintenance Policy.

The president, IFMA, Nigeria chapter, Mr. Segun Adedayo, who gave the commendation on Wednesday, noted that, the Order is long overdue and with this action, professional management and maintenance of federal assets are assured and guaranteed.

According to him, “as we earnestly look forward to the implementation of the provisions of the new order, through the setting up of maintenance departments in MDAs, our association is committed to collaborating with federal government through relevant ministries to provide required capacity building and knowledge development.

“As an association, we have been advocating the integration of sustainable practices into the built environment and this has started yielding the desired results.”

While equally appreciating the minister of Works and Housing, Mr. Babatunde Raji Fashola, for this feat, he said his efforts in the ministry have yielded phenomenal results and would positively impact the various projects that this administration has embarked upon.

The executive order states that the federal government is committed to establishing a sustained maintenance programme to optimise the enormous investment in public infrastructure.

The government is determined to provide sustainable employment, job opportunities for large, small, and medium-sized businesses, artisans, and persons with vocational skills. Equally, the public assets would be maintained at a minimal cost.

Africa’s Cocoa Export Faces Fresh Challenges

BY CHIKA IZUORA, Lagos

African cocoa exporters would be facing another tough year due to the economic pressures that the Russia-Ukraine war has already weighed on the EU, a key importer of Africa’s cocoa beans.

This is as Nigeria’s potential joining of the Living Income Differential(LID), system set by cocoa producers shall contribute to creating a “Cocoa Opec” in West Africa with a stronger price-setting capacity that can eventually benefit poor farmers.

Experts say that cocoa alliance can ensure fair returns for small farmers.

Citing a Bloomberg report, Oxford Economics said that Nigeria is looking forward to joining the LID employed by Côte d’Ivoire and Ghana, which set a $400/ton premium on the export price of cocoa from the 2020/2021 crop.

This premium has been set in place to combat farmers’ poverty. While over 70 per cent of the world’s cocoa production comes from Africa, cocoa famers earn only six per cent of the price that consumers pay for chocolate, said the briefing issued on Monday.

The ministry of Agriculture is expected to hold talks about the potential alliance with the Ghana Cocoa Board in May.

Nigeria is the fourth largest producer of cocoa, accounting for 6.5 per cent of the global production. The sector is dominated by at least 300,000 smallholder famers with a cultivated area of 1,400,000 hectares.

“While Nigeria’s cocoa production figures are well below that of Côte d’Ivoire and Ghana, the country’s overreliance on its hydrocarbons sector has weighed on its potential in recent times, as oil production has dwindled,” Oxford Economics said.

BY CHIKA IZUORA, Lagos

Experts are expected to discuss the regulatory changes in the lubricant sub-sector of the energy sector at the International Lubricants Conference (ILC), the 2022 Nigeria edition which will hold virtually on the 28th and 29th April, 2022.

The two-day conference themed, “Technology and its application to the lubricants industry”, will feature a panel of global industry experts who will share insights on global trends and outlook for the future.

The conference is a series of online free conferences connecting lubricant manufacturers with end-users, buyers, vendors, government agencies and other key stakeholders in the lubricants industry.

The event will enlighten relevant stakeholders on innovative industry developments and the advancement of the lubricants market world-wide.

This year’s discussions will address issues such as technological advancements in the lubricants industry over the years, the influence of digital technology on the lubricant industry value chain, global regulatory changes as well as an analysis of the raw material supply chain and logistics in Nigeria.

According to consultant to the International Lubricant Conference, Dapo Keshinro, Nigeria is the second biggest lubricant consumer in Africa.

The lubricant sub-sector of Nigeria’s petroleum industry is an essential part of the downstream industry which is complementary to the fuel business.

“The ILC is a free-to-attend conference that brings together industry stakeholders who will discuss relevant industry topics in real time. The growth of the industry is dependent on events such as this where industry leaders can share and align on strategies to shape the future of the sector,” Dapo said.

The conference will feature experts in the global lubricants market including Taiye Williams, managing director Lubcon Limited; Indu M Gupta, director for Product Research and Development, Innova Refining & Trading FZE; Niket Shah, director Openspace Services Pvt Ltd; Lilian Ikokwu, chief marketing officer OVH Energy Marketing; Roberto Vargas, Technical and Commercial Consultant for the Lubricant Industry in Latin America; Godwin Gabriel-Ejeh, General Manager Operations, Pacegate Limited.

Champions League: Minister Extols Kanu, Finidi, Mikel Feat, Wishes Chukwueze Luck

BY SALIFU USMAN, ABUJA

The minister of youth and sports development, Mr Sunday Dare, has expressed delight for the memorable achievement of the trio of former Nigerian internationals - Kanu Nwankwo, Finidi George and John Mikel Obi - in the UEFA Champions League. The trio are among the only 24 African footballers to have lifted the prestigious Champions League trophy. Mikel Obi after missing out on the 2008 UEFA Champions League trophy, losing to Manchester United in a penalty shootout, went on to win the prestigious trophy four years later in Munich beating Bayern Munich in the final. The duo of Finidi George and Kanu Nwankwo played alongside ex-Netherland international, Clarence Seedorf, who is currently in Nigeria in company of the 2021/2022 UEFA Champions League Trophy tour of the country, for AFC Ajax lifted the title in 1995. Receiving the Champions League Trophy in his office at the Moshood Abiola National Stadium Abuja on yesterday, Minister Dare expressed excitement over the choice of Nigeria for the touring of the Trophy, describing it as the second most important Trophy in football after the FIFA World Cup title. He said Nigeria, undoubtedly a football loving nation, has a strong attachment to the UEFA Champions League. “Nigerians have made significant inclusion into the UEFA Champions League. We can go down memory lane to recall Finidi George and Kanu Nwankwo, who were teammates to Clarence Seedorf who is here with us today. They won the Champions League trophy at Ajax in 1995. Austin Jay Jay Okocha, Daniel Amokachi, Kanu Nwankwo and along with Finidi George represent the golden generation of Nigeria football stars till date. Again in 2012, John Mikel Obi won the trophy with Chelsea and in November 1992, it was on record that the first goal scored in the present format of the competition was scored by Nigerian Daniel Amokachi,” Dare stated. He expressed optimism that Samuel Chukwueze, who is the only Nigerian left in the 2021/2022 Champions League campaign will hopefully be the next Nigerian to put his hands on the trophy.

NBBF To Commence Para Basketball League In 2023

BY SALIFU USMAN, ABUJA

President of Nigeria Basketball Federation (NBBF) faction, Igoche Mark, has assured para-basketball players that the federation would by next year put in place a para-basketball league in the country. Mark made the promise after watching a para-basketball game at the ongoing National Para Games in Abuja on Wednesday. He said his led NBBF board has a target of developing the basketball sport from the grassroots. “This is a promise, with an all-inclusive package that will include all players, irrespective of their physical challenge or situation.

“We have promised basketball stakeholders, including players, officials and administrators, that the main goal of our board is grass roots development. “It is a development that will be all-inclusive, irrespective of the physical challenge anyone might be going through,” he said. The NBBF president said the federation would in due course make further pronouncements on the para-basketball league. He commended the Federal Ministry of Youth and Sports Development for organising and hosting the National Para Games, saying it is a good omen for the overall development of sports.

Onyechi Boosts John Utaka Academy Tour Of France

US based philanthropist, Dr Napoleon Onyechi, has offered incentives to John Utaka Academy of Minna in support of the team’s proposed playing tour of France, next month. The Grand patron of the club was the guest of honour during a friendly match between John Utaka Academy and FC International at Old Parade Ground, Abuja to commemorate his award with a doctoral degree in health management by Irsbaccom University of Benin Republic. Onyechi, accompanied by his wife, described the match organised by the academy, owned by former Super Eagles striker, John Utaka as an honour he never anticipated. “I am honoured to see the young people come out to support me and participate in this joyful occasion. I feel humbled and proud of the young kids and urge them to devote their time to something productive instead of hanging out on the street. Anything I can do to support them, I will. This is our home. We have to support our own children and give them the right direction,” Onyechi said.

The team is due to play a series of friendly matches with youth clubs in France including Lyon, Nice, Monaco, Strasbourg and Montpellier, where Utaka is presently an assistant coach. The Vice President of John Utaka Academy, Usman Chatta applauded Onyechi, who was introduced to the club by Soccer Ambassador, Friday Kudjah for his gesture, saying his visit has motivated the team. Chatta said the team that has former National U-17 player Yusuf Bolarinwa and Jimmy Abdul that played in the last U-20 WAFU Cup and a couple of players from Ghana, was in Abuja to process its visa to travel by the first week of May. The team was forced to alter its original travel plan for this month arising from a delay in booking the flight for all 22 players and eight officers. He said the tour of France will boost the morale of the team as they will play Strasbourg, which is presently placed fifth in the French League. He said the French team has been calling day in day out to know about the team’s arrival time for this particular friendly.

Lakeside Proud Of Youngsters

Lakeside Academy Bariga Lagos has expressed delight over the fast rate at which players from the outfit are getting better with future prospects. Olalekan Ganiyu, the CEO of the Academy said the professional way in which the outfit is being administered has helped greatly in the development of the players. He told newsmen on Tuesday that the players are being given the correct basic morals, techniques and all the foundation routines to grow better. “It is not all coaches that know how to raise young ones to stardom. There are elementary things those starting the game should know and when it becomes necessary they apply those skills with ease,” Ganiyu said. Head Coach of the academy, who also handles the high-flying Lakeside Queens, Oluwatobi Ganiyu, added that there were dividends already about the structure of the academy. “We train them with the modern global details, maybe minus the facilities. The routine of what the young ones should know are exposed to our players at Lakeside,” he said.

Self-indicted Leaders

It was the leader of Italy, Benito Mussolini, who, during the second World War (1939-1945) in which his country was a major participant, likened war to maternity which is women's most painful but, most often, unavoidable experience. He aptly described war as a version of maternity for men and also their biggest challenge in life.

In other words, war is a natural occurrence from which men can not completely escape and are therefore expected to always be prepared to face it either as attackers or defenders. The human tendencies for aggression and retaliation have continued to find clear practical expressions in the physical attacks, counter-attacks and all other forms of violence with mostly men as the perpetrators or victims.

Such violent occurrences are now the most prevalent realities in most parts of Northern Nigeria with a lot of the local communities as victims of their terrible effects. The growing rate of the attacks on the people which continuously results in the rapid decimation of the population has continued to show the incapacity or unreadiness of the government to provide adequate security for the citizens.

The growing calls on all vulnerable communities to adopt self-defence are an expression of dissatisfaction over the approach of the government to the insecurity in the North and some other parts of the country. Even the government, in what has already appeared to be an acceptance of defeat, has unhesitatingly thrown its weight behind the self-defence clamour without the least consideration of the danger that the acquisition of arms by individuals and groups which causes unhealthy proliferation of volunteer security outfits portends for the country.

So far, the attitude of the government to the prevailing insecurity in the land is characterised by denials, blame game and even self-indictment, each of which is a factor that aggravates the situation. Aside the consistent denial of the fact that terror attacks are on the rise and the baseless insistence that the situation is under control, the government frequently and shamelessly shifts the blame to some other quarters even when some of its key functionaries at various levels and a lot of other stakeholders in the governance of the country have already admitted that they have woefully failed to live up to their constitutional responsibilities.

In one way or another, State Governors like Aminu Bello Masari of Katsina, Nasiru Ahmed El-Rufa'i of Kaduna, Mohammed Bello Matwalli of Zamfara, Mohammed Sani Bello of Niger, Aminu Waziri Tmbuwal of Sokoto and Samuel Ortom of Benue have all expressed frustration over the speedy deterioration of security in their respective states. Even the Minister of Defense, Bashir Salihu Magashi and some prominent members of the National Assembly like Senators Smart Adeyemi and Ali Ndume as well as Majority Leader in the Federal House of Representatives, Alhassan Ado Doguwa and several other members of the House bitterly complained about the continuous abduction and killing of innocent people across the country.

Whether they are denials by Information Minister – Lai Mohammed and the spokespersons of the President – Femi Adesina and Garba Shehu or they are calls for the adoption of self-defense as made by Governors Masari and Ortom as well as Honourable Minister Magashi or they are unequivocal confessions about the failure of the government to protect the lives and properties of the people by Governor El-Rufa'i and others, they are all a confirmation of the existence of terrible gaps in the security architecture of the country. Each of the reactions is a bold testimony to the fact that, on matters of security, Nigerians are on their own.

The strong recommendation of self-defence, by some State Governors and even the Minister of Defence, is a clear acknowledgement of the superiority of the might of the terrorists and an absolute submission to their will. It is a particular kind of reaction that simultaneously emboldens criminals and demoralizes or even devastates targets of violent attacks.

Obviously, the continuous rise of violent crimes is a direct consequence of the realisation by all various categories of the perpetrators that their targets are most vulnerable. A lot of the pronouncements of some government officials must have made the offenders to believe that all the law enforcement agencies have packed up and they can therefore freely choose what to do with the citizens.

El-Rufa'i's confession or admission of failure and the request for forgiveness is, unfortunately, only an acceptance of reality but not expression of determination to step up effort towards the control of the situation. It is, in fact, seen as some kind of bid to take undue advantage of the naivety of the people to exonerate himself from the huge blame for the disturbing inaction that has been the reason for the escalation of violence in Kaduna State and beyond.

Meanwhile, in all the reactions of the government to the security challenges, it is the self-indictment by El-Rufa'i and his likes that is most interesting because it has exposed the inherent hypocrisy in all their approach to the problem. Nothing can be more hypocritical than an admission of such a failure even to the extent of self-indictment without a commensurate resolve to bring about a noticeable improvement.

Even with the self-exoneration effort and the apology, the self-indictment stands and it will remain a fact to which reference will continuously be made. No any other proof is required to establish the fact that the failure of the government to execute its mandate is both apparent and extensive enough to cripple a nation. Such a self-indictment, especially if it is not followed by a determination to strengthen the capacity for delivery, easily erodes public confidence in leaders.

As it is now, all the self-indicted leaders have lost substantial quantity of their reputation and have, as a result, become objects of ridicule. It is only the power they control and not their reputation or integrity that still sustains them, which explains both the resort to self-help by some of the victims of the frequent terror attacks as recommended and the resignation to fate by many others.

There is almost a conclusion now that the kind of rescue that is most desperately needed is moving further away from the people considering the fast rising incidences of insecurity, joblessness, and the resultant poverty. If, with all the support that the citizens extended to those who are currently in positions of power at the critical times of need, what obtains now is the prevalence of an atmosphere of extreme fear, definitely the loss of hope for an early salvation is most justifiable.
